PROBE ORDERED
BY TEXAS HOUSE

Motion To Investigate Administration of Woman Governor Passes By 104-22 Vote.

FUND OF $25,000
GIVEN PROBERS.

Action Is Taken in House After Fight Between Friends of Governor and of Dan Moody.

Austin, Texas, September 16.—(P)— Investigation of the administration of state departments under the regime of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson was ordered late today by the lower house of the Texas legislature, which is in special session.

The vote was 104 to 22.

An appropriation of $25,000 from the contingent expense fund was made to care for the investigation, which will begin after adjournment and be carried on by nine members to be appointed by the speaker. The committee will report to the fourth legislature.

Fight in House.
The passage of the investigation resolutions followed a fight in the house between representatives favorable to the Ferguson administration and opponents of Attorney General Dan Moody, democratic gubernatorial nominee.

The resolution adopted provides especially for an inquiry into the conduct of the state highway commission, the text book commission and the parson board, all of which have come under the fire of Attorney General Dan Moody who defeated Governor
Ferguson for re-nomination.

Investigation of the records of the treasury department and railroad commission to ascertain whether oil and sulphur companies are paying and have paid the full state gross production tax, and of activities of members of both houses of the legislature before various state departments, also is provided.

Validating Road Bonds.
The special session was called by Governor Ferguson during the recent primary campaign "for the purpose of validating of road bonds declared unconstitutional by the supreme court of the United States and to investigate any state departments deemed necessary."

Action by the house in preparing for a report to the next regular legislature session throws the investigation under the incoming regime of Moody who will become governor next January. Governor Ferguson had asked that any investigation be disposed of at the special session.

LODGED IN TOWER

J. Edward Silvey Brought Here From Fitzgerald for Questioning by Solicitor General Boykin.

J. J. TUMLIN MOVES
TO SECURE LIBERTY

Brother of Slain Woman, Held in Case, Asks Habeas Corpus; Hearing
This Morning.

J. Edward Silvey, 52, was brought to Fulton tower at 10 o'clock Thursday night by Deputy Sheriff R. T.
Tolbert and the Rev. Charles Hollis from Fitzgerald, for questioning relative to the slaying of Miss Tumlin Tuesday at her home on Howell Mill and Moore Mill roads.

While hearing was pending on habeas corpus proceedings instituted by James J. Tumlin, held in Fulton tower in connection with the murder of his sister, Solicitor General John A.
Boykin, Thursday, was busy engaged taking statements from more than a dozen neighbors of Tumlin in an effort to hold him in custody.

Silvey declared last night that he stood ready to answer Solicitor General Boykin's questions. He said that what officers in Fitzgerald took for blood on his shoes were just grease spots. His reason for driving in his suits when arrested was that this method of driving his automobile was cooler on his feet, he said.

Denies Insulting Woman.
Silvey's arrest at Abbeville was made at the instigation of a Mrs. Cannon, whom he was charged with insulting, although he told newspaper reporters Thursday night that he merely asked Mrs. Cannon for a glass of water and that beyond his thanks for the favor, no other words passed between them. The arresting officers at Abbeville advised him to pay Mrs.
Cannon $25 and square the deal, Silvey declared.

After 41 years' residence in Atlanta, Silvey moved to Daytona, Fla., where he became connected with the gas company, and he was on his way back to Daytona from Atlanta by automobile with his family when arrested, he said.

Proceedings seeking to secure release of Tumlin were filed in Fulton superior court Thursday by Tumlin's attorney, Dan G. Guilfoyle, and set out that Tumlin had been detained without cause and without charges in Fulton tower since a few hours after his sister had been brutally murdered.

Hearing Today.
Judge E. E. Pomeroy signed the petition and set 9:30 o'clock this morning for hearing before Judge John D. Humphries in Fulton superior court.

The body of Miss Tumlin, 39, was found Tuesday night, clad in her night clothes on the floor of a room in her home, Howell's mill road near the Moore's mill road. A black satin ribbon was around her neck and tied in the back in a knot while her head showed signs that she had been brutally beaten with a blunt instrument.

Boykin Asks Custody.
Despite the fact that a coroner's jury Wednesday afternoon found that the woman had come to her death by strangulation at the hands of parties unknown to the jury, Solicitor Boykin asked a letter requesting Sheriff James L. Lowry to hold Tumlin in custody until a thorough investigation could be made of the murder.

Members of the county police force who are conducting the investigation are being kept in the tower.

Mother of Angelus Temple Evangelist, Radio Operator and Two Others Are Involved.

CONSPIRACY LAID TO FIVE PERSONS

Action Is Imperative in Interest of Public, Declares District Attorney
Asa Keyes.

Los Angeles, September 16.—(P)— Arrest of Aimee Sempé McPherson, Angelus temple evangelist; Mrs.
Minnie Kennedy, her mother; Kenneth
G. Ormiston, former Angelus temple radio operator; John Doe Martin and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Sheila, was ordered late today by District Attorney Asa Keyes.

Complaints charging the five persons with conspiracy to defeat justice were formally ordered by the district attorney. Deputy District Attorney E. J. Dennison, Harold L. Davis and E. J. Lively were instructed to draw the complaints.

The complaints will bear the signature of Charles Reimer, assistant chief of detectives under Keyes, and service of them entrusted to Ben Cohn, chief of the district attorney's detectives.

Cohn will serve the warrants on Mrs. McPherson tomorrow at Angelus temple, it was announced.

Ormiston, according to his attorney,
S. S. Hahn, will accept service of the warrant here in Los Angeles. Hahn, in conference with District Attorney Keyes, said that he would produce Ormiston immediately. He indicated that he had been in touch with the former radio operator near Alhambra, a suburb of Los Angeles.

Keyes said following the issuance of the order that he would prepare a statement at once.

Keyes today ordered Mrs. Emma Schaeffer, secretary for Aimee Sempé McPherson, Angelus temple evangelist, to appear at the first official summons to a member of the Angelus temple official family in the new investigation into the evangelist's disappearance case.

An official of the district attorney's office was sent to the temple with orders to return with the secretary.
Previously, an invitation to appear for a conference on the new developments in their case, was declined, the evangelist personally informing the chief deputy district attorney by telephone that she was "too ill," and that her mother was "too tired."

District Attorney Keyes declared:
"That will make no difference in the action I have decided to take."
Information disseminated at the county offices was that complaints were being drawn in the case. It was said they charged violations of sections 118, 127 and 134 of the California penal code. These, in the above order, are perjury, subornation of perjury and preparation of false documents.
Five copies of each were being drawn,
it was said.

Cause of Arrests.
Orders for the five arrests grew out of a third official investigation in the strange case of the disappearance of the evangelist May 18, at Ocean Park, near here, and her reappearance June 23, at Douglas, Ariz., with a story of having been kidnapped.

Elements of this third investigation were revelations by Mrs. Wiseman-Sheila that she had been furnished money from Angelus temple in efforts to produce a woman to be identified as the occupant of a cottage at Carmel, California. Immediately

Charges by the Florida Chamber subjected to extremely heavy fines for alleged violations of speed laws

April Grand Jury Is Summoned To Convene Monday Morning To Consider New Charges.

WIDOW AND AIDES WILL PLEAD TODAY

Mrs. Hall and Three Kinsmen Will Be Arraigned Today To Make Denial of Allegations.

Somerville, N. J., September 16.—
"Jersey justice," rolling along with newly-acquired momentum, continued to pass legal mileposts Thursday as Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson guided the prosecution to its goal—trial of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her three kinsmen for the murders of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, four years ago.

These were the outstanding developments in a day full of action:

1. Announcement that Mrs. Hall, her two brothers, Willie and Henry Stevens, and her cousin, Henry De La Bruyere Carpenter, indicted for murder in connection with the mysterious crime, will be arraigned Friday morning. Supreme Court Justice Charles W. Parker, of Somerville, will receive their pleas of "not guilty" and may fix, at the request of Simpson, a date for the trial at which the wealthy Hall relatives will fight for their lives.

2. The April grand jury which,
when suddenly called into special session, voted the indictments, was called again to convene Monday morning.
Among these are Ralph V. Gorsline, vestryman in Dr. Hall's fashionable New Brunswick church, and Louise Geist Reich, maid in the Hall home at the time of the murders.

3. Simpson's fear that prejudice and politics might hinder justice caused him to demand a foreign jury.
Simpson Explains Indictment.
"Henry Stevens was on the scene of the crime the night his brother-in-law, Dr. Hall, and Mrs. Mills were murdered," Simpson said, explaining his indictment. "We have witnesses, and have had a witness right along,
ever since his arrest."

This is the first announcement that Henry, whose indictment came as a surprise, was at the crime.

Orders to have the case tried before a jury from another country was assured when Simpson conferred with Chief Justice William E. Gummere and arranged for the jury's arrangement to go before the supreme court September 23 to ask for a foreign jury.

Hall Stays Home.
Mrs. Hall remained at her New Brunswick home, incommunicado. It was said that Simpson planned to le-nate a substantial increase in the $15,000 bail, on which she is enjoying liberty. He does not, however, plan to seek Mrs. Hall's confinement in jail.

MEXICAN ACTION
IN MURDER CASE

Secretary Asks That All Possible Steps Be Taken To Punish Rosenthal's Slayers.

ACTION IS PROMPT
FOLLOWING CRIME

American Authorities Still Are Disposed To Give Mexican Officials Benefit of Doubt.

Washington, September 16.—(P)—
Secretary Kellogg tonight instructed Charge Schoenfeld, at Mexico City, to make representations to the Calles government to leave no stone unturned in apprehending and punishing the slayers of Jacob Rosenthal, of New York.

The secretary's action came shortly after the receipt of news from Mexico telling of the death of the American at the hands of brigands.

Will Exert Every Effort.
This shows that the state department is prepared to exert every effort to establish responsibility for the killing and to take the firm line in demanding the punishment of those guilty.

Although the text of the instructions does not make public the announcement clearly shows that the Washington government feels that such offense against its nationals warrants prompt action by the Mexican authorities.

Pending further developments, state department officials refused to forecast what additional steps might be taken, but it was made clear that officials here believe the Calles government has shown good faith in its attempt to capture the brigands who were holding Rosenthal for ransom.

The kidnapping of Rosenthal was an other of a long string of similar crimes committed against Americans over a period of years. Several of the abductions have been in the Guernavaia district. Repeated protests have been made from Washington, and the United States has been no cause for complaint. The extent to which the latest outbreak may indicate a recurrence of outlaw returns to the examination of the facts.

Weigh Results With Care.
It is evident that American officials will weigh the results of their investigation with great deliberation, and that if a change in American policy is decided on, it will be only because the most serious considerations appear to demand it. The administration of President Coolidge has been making a studied effort to maintain friendly relations with Mexico City, in so far as a large degree of peace and the fundamental differences that have arisen over the new Mexican oil and land laws have not been permitted to reach a critical stage.

The bandits carried out the threat made when they captured Rosenthal while he was en route from Cuernavaca, a resort town, to Mexico City. At that time they sent a note by other members of the Rosenthal party to the military commander at Mexico City stating that if any attempt were made by federal troops to follow them they would take their captive's life.

Pursuit by troops and friends of Rosenthal was immediate and when the bandits realized that their capture seemed imminent they are alleged to have stabbed their American prisoner, killing him almost instantly. Most of the bandit party fled but two were killed by pursuing troops.

BANDITS MURDER
JACOB ROSENTHAL.
Mexico City, September 16.—Jacob Rosenthal, 62 years old, a retired business man of Woodmore, Long Island, has been murdered by Mexican bandits who captured him Sunday, according to official messages received here.

Search for remaining members of the bandit gang continues.

Joseph Ruff, Rosenthal's son-in-law, a Mexico City business man who was with the murdered man when the capture was made and who was released by the bandits, collapsed when he received word of the killing. So serious was his condition that he was sent to a hospital immediately. Ruff feels that he is partly responsible for his father-in-law's death as he invited
other members of the Rosenthal party without sleep for three days and his physicians fear he will suffer a nervous breakdown.

Last word from Rosenthal was received Wednesday morning in a note to Ruff which the bandits permitted to reach its destination. Rosenthal wrote:

"I am two miles east of the place where we ate Sunday, on the way from Cuernavaca to Mexico City. The bandits want $10,000. Hurry up.
Love, From Jacob Rosenthal."

CHURCH PAPER APPEALS TO PARENTS AGAINST BODY
Of Junior Atheist League

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Organized atheism has come to Atlanta. The society, chartered under the laws of the state of New York in November of last year, is not a thing of but distant interest to Atlantians; a thing which lives only in the east and merely makes a queer item of news, under a distant dateline in the daily papers.

There is an Atlanta chapter of the Junior Atheist league, which is a subsidiary of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism. This fact became known when copies of an announcement, printed in Atlanta and sent out by the Atlanta chapter, were received here.

A copy of this announcement, setting forth the aims of the atheistic organization, is published in the current number of "The Christian Index," together with an appeal to parents to "save our homes from the fearful consequences."

The announcement of the Junior Atheist league declares that it "will remove boys and girls from the evil influence of the clergy. It will encourage them to protest against Bible reading and religious worship in public schools and agitate against religious instruction during school hours. . . .

The magical, animistic and phallic, or sexual origins of religion will be explained in simple language."

Further, the league assures, "morality based on the findings of modern science will supersede belief based on the speculations of ancient Asiatic theology."

Again it asserts, "the attainment of happiness in this world rather than eternal bliss in a world to come shall be taught the rising generation as the chief end of man. Dismissing the illusion of immortality, the league will free sons and daughters from the fear of hell and the hope of heaven. Sacrifice for post-mortem considerations will be shown to be criminal folly."

This is the kind of propaganda the Christian Index appeals to its readers to defeat. And, again, it is pointed out that this announcement is sent out by the Atlanta chapter of the Junior Atheist league.

The organized Atheists of America seem to have reached Atlanta and the south.

PRIMARY RETURNS
SEEN AS VICTORY
BY WHITE HOUSE

President Coolidge Is Represented as Regarding Results as Generally Satisfactory.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Paul Smiths, N. Y., September 16.
President Coolidge is represented as being well pleased with the results of the senatorial and congressional primaries which are practically all voted
now. He regards them as on the whole satisfactory and not damaging to the prestige of the administration.

In only two cases were the senatorial nominations distinctly adversely affected. Defeat of Senator Lenroot by Gore nor Blaine, of Wisconsin, was expected and even here some satisfaction is taken in the showing Lenroot made in the face of almost certain defeat.
The other major reverse was the defeat of Senator Cummings in Iowa by Smith W. Brookhart. The president can find no harm in that result.

President Feels Satisfied.
But in all other senatorial primaries and in some of the other contests
Coolidge feels that he has fared well.
In Colorado one of the administration senators was defeated. Senator Rice W. Means, but by an old friend of the president, Charles W. Waterman formerly of Vermont, and in 1924 the Coolidge manager in Colorado and later secretary of the president's oil conservation board. His candidacy was frankly regarded at the white house as futile. It was thought that he might, by being defeated, cause some damage to the president.

It was a genuine surprise here when he pulled through as he had been opposed by Senator Phillips, a power in Colorado politics.

In the Michigan gubernatorial primary the pro-Coolidge group also fared well by defeating Governor Groesbeck and nominating Fred Green, mayor of Ionia, Mich., a protégé of Charles B. Warren, the man whom

Madison Avenue Extension Complete, Provides Great New Traffic Artery

One of the most important street improvements ever made in Atlanta was completed Thursday when the new Madison Avenue extension, connecting Spring street with Whitehall street on the south side, was thrown open to the public. With this unit of a general plan to widen Whitehall street finished steps will be taken at once to complete the widening of Whitehall street from Windsor street to Stewart avenue, was announced by J. L. McCord, prominent Atlanta business man, who has served as chairman of the committee in charge of this work.

Mr. McCord and Robert L. Pennington, member of council from the first ward, both of whom have been working on this project for three years, were present when the new extension officially was opened Thursday. In checks they made on Thursday it was shown that more than 1,000 vehicles were nosing over the new street every hour.

This project has been called "the key that unlocks the south side," and it will afford a new artery for cross-town traffic running from the north to the south. At Spring street it connects with the Spring street boulevard to the north and on the south end connects with Whitehall street. It is 80 feet wide and connects with Whitehall by Garrett, Brotherton and Castellberry streets, while branches also connect with Peters street on the west.

McCord Given Credit. Mr. McCord is known as the "father" of the project and was responsible for carrying out the improvement plan successfully. He was aided in council by Mr. Pennington, who waged a single-handed fight for this project and obtained the necessary appropriations from the city to make its completion possible. Mr. McCord handled nearly all property deals necessary to get the rights-of-way and to insure completion of the improvement. The Fulton county commission as well as the city council cooperated and aided greatly in the work.

"Opening of this new street marks an important epoch in the development of Atlanta," Mr. McCord said. "It provides a new cross-town artery from north to south which avoids the congested business section. It relieves Whitehall street downtown section of much traffic and will afford additional parking space for the merchants on that street. It gives a quick route for automobiles going across town, both to the south and to the north and connects with important state highways to south Georgia, west Georgia and to Alabama."

Mr. McCord paid tribute to the service to the city rendered by Mr. Pennington.

Praises His Aides. "Bob Pennington started up many nights and worked many weary days to aid us in this project," he said. "If the people of Atlanta ever owed any city official a debt of gratitude they owe it to Mr. Pennington. He worked in a quiet and effective way, but always was on the job to get the aid of the city. Due to his personal popularity with council members and to his wholehearted interest in the project and to his tireless energy in working for it he was able to get through an immense amount of work which many regarded as hopeless and impossible when he began his work." This unit is but the first unit in the plan to improve Whitehall street on the south and open up that section, according to Mr. McCord. "We have the Whitehall street widening project in excellent shape now," he said. "Council has approved it, through the efforts of Mr. Pennington, and with the aid of the county commission we can have this street widened soon and give to Atlanta another great traffic artery and another fine business section. Progressive property owners along the streets involved are aiding in the movement and it will soon be carried out successfully."

Cost $350,000. Total cost of the improvement project amounted to about $350,000 and it has been completed almost without the people of Atlanta realizing the magnitude of the improvement or the vast importance it bears on the future development and expansion of the city. "When this project first was discussed many people laughed at us," Mr. McCord said, "but Bob Pennington joined in the movement and by working together we have succeeded in finishing it. It not only provides this fine new street extension but includes the pavement of an important stretch of Peters street, which also will benefit from the project."

Many prominent citizens of Atlanta congratulated both Mr. McCord and Mr. Pennington Thursday, declaring they had done almost alone one of the biggest things for Atlanta in the city's recent history.

Mr. Pennington is now at work on a movement to have the Georgia Railway & Power company arrange its tracks so that its cars to the western part of the city which now use one block of Madison Avenue can be routed across the Mitchell street viaduct.

Other Improvements Seen. "If this is done it will remove the last street car tracks on the Spring street-Madison Avenue boulevard and will relieve much of the congestion now existing at the intersection of Mitchell street with Spring and Madison," Mr. Pennington said. "We feel that officials of the company will cooperate with us in this plan, if it is feasible, and have every assurance that they are willing to cooperate in any movement which has for its purpose the relief of the entire city. We hope to take up this matter as early as possible and if the street car tracks are removed from this one block on Madison Avenue a boulevard without any tracks of any kind will be provided from Whitehall and Forsyth streets junction on the south side to the intersection of Spring and Peachtree streets near the Brookwood station on the north," he asserted.

SECOND AIRPLANE READY FOR LOCAL POSTAL SERVICE

"Miss Maeon," sister ship of the "Miss Atlanta," will be ready Tuesday to leave Detroit for Candler field to join the fleet of the Florida Airways corporation in carrying mail between Atlanta and Florida points, according to a telegram received Thursday night by H. D. Dennis, public relations representative, from Major Reed M. Chambers, president of Florida Airways.

Eddie Stinson, designer of the three Stinson-Detroit planes bought by the Florida Airways, the first of their kind to be used in federal air mail service, will accompany the "Miss Maeon" here. Mr. Stinson is president of the Stinson Aircraft corporation and holds a prominent place among American aviators, having been connected with airplanes for the past 15 years.

Chief Pilot N. W. Potter, of the Florida Airways, will pilot the second new ship to Atlanta. The "Miss Atlanta," first of the three new planes to be delivered, has already inaugurated its service and the third plane will be ready within a few days, it was announced.

Major Chambers Thursday wired his thanks to The Constitution, through Mr. Dennis, for the cooperation offered by the local papers, and thanking Colonel Charles Danforth, Alderman W. B. Hartsfield, the chamber of commerce, civic organizations and others for their part in the successful pioneer work in the development of the Georgia-Florida air route.

With the opening of the Atlanta-Miami air mail route crowned a success, at an elaborate program Wednesday afternoon at Candler field when "Miss Atlanta" arrived from Jacksonville with a cargo of 10 mail pouches and two passengers, members of the Atlanta post department and officials of the Florida Airways company have settled down to a regular schedule of travel and regular routine of business, it was announced Thursday afternoon.

Following the arrival of the plane Wednesday afternoon, the mail was quickly assorted and placed in the hands of Atlanta long before it could have reached the city from Florida points had it come by the regular train routes.

The plane left the city Thursday morning on a return flight and later in the day made special trips here from Alabama to take part in the opening ceremonies of the new government air stations in Montgomery and Birmingham, Ala.

In his acceptance speech Crisp said that the best thought of the nation is now being devoted to the solution of the agricultural problem. He further declared that "throughout the length and breadth of our land agriculture languishes," and that he would support any legislature economically sound that will ameliorate present conditions on the farm, adding "I fear congress cannot relieve the situation."

He declared that "the great trouble is over-production and limited marketing." Under the present republican administration, he said, there is no possibility of protective tariffs being reduced or freight rates lowered, adding that reduction of tariff and freight rates would aid agriculture.

All industrial centers are prosperous, he said, and class legislation was responsible for their prosperity. Mr. Crisp declared that freight rates are excessively high, especially on farm products. "I earnestly favor," he said, "the passage of a law requiring interstate commerce commissions to reduce freight rates, especially on perishable agricultural products."

"In my judgment," he continued, "the greatest danger hovering over America today is the corrupt use of money to defraud the electorate. The protective tariff enables republicans to control elections, the manufacturers contributing most liberally out of their huge profits caused through the tariffs they are enabled to gouge the American people. If the corrupt use of money is not stopped popular government will be destroyed."

Famous Twin Auctioneers Will Handle Georgia Sales

The "world's original twin auctioneers"—the Penny brothers—known throughout the nation for their operations in the auction field, have announced their advent into Georgia for the purpose of conducting a series of auctions which will attract state-wide interest.

John R. Dortch, of Atlanta, representative of the Penny brothers, made the above announcement Thursday. It was through the efforts of Mr. Dortch, who is well known throughout this section of the country in real estate circles, that the Penny brothers decided to come to Georgia on this, their 25th annual tour. Mr. Dortch stated that many landowners have been anxious for some time for the Penny brothers to come to Georgia and the announcement of their schedule will be greeted with much interest in all sections of the state.

The first auction is scheduled for September 20-21 at Valdosta, Ga., which will be conducted for the Quaker Oats company. Business and residence property will occupy the attention of the Penny brothers on this occasion.

An auction will be conducted for Edwin G. Rankin at Blackshear, Ga., on the following day. Residence lots and small farms will be the attraction on the auction block.

On September 24 the Penny brothers will go to Douglas, Ga., to auction 2,200 acres of fine tobacco lands, according to the announcement, for the Georgia Farm Lands, Inc.

The following day they will appear at Kite, Ga., for C. M. Showers. Business houses and residence lots will be auctioned.

Business, residence lots and small farms will be auctioned for Moody.

Mothers Look for the Quaker's picture when buying oats.

That means richer flavor

WHEN children say they don't like oats, it's usually because rich Quaker flavor is missing.

Children who ordinarily don't take to oats are often quickly won to this important food, simply by giving them "Quaker."

The flavor is uniquely different; tasty, rich, and creamy. Quaker Oats alone has it. Some 50 years were spent in perfecting it.

Quaker milling, too, retains much of the "bulk" of oats. And that makes laxatives less often needed. Thus protein, carbohydrates and vitamins and "bulk" combine in making Quaker Oats an excellently balanced ration.

Taylor and McRae at Boston, Ga., September 27.
The Penny brothers will appear at Thomasville September 28 to conduct an auction for E. D. McRae, on residence property.
They will go to Tifton on the following day for Dr. W. E. White, residence property also being auctioned there.

The schedule ends with a return to Valdosta, where residence property will be auctioned for Tillman-Winn-Smith and Goodwin.

The Penny brothers are known throughout the southeast, having been engaged in the business for many successful years. They maintain headquarters at Greensboro, N. C., and operate under the name of the American Land company.

For many years the two brothers appear together, have conducted auction sales in the south. Thousands of acres of Florida land were disposed of by the brothers, whose effective sales methods have built up for them a vast auction business.

They are represented in this state by John R. Dortch, of Atlanta, and R. E. Richardson, of Gainesville, Ga. Auction sales which are announced for this month are expected to attract thousands of buyers from all sections of the south. A great deal of interest is held in the tobacco lands around Douglas, Ga., and this particular sale probably will attract a great number of buyers from Atlanta and the northern section of the state, it is said.

This is the 25th annual tour of the Penny brothers, who for a quarter of a century have held unique places in auction circles of America.

DONALD KISSANE APPEARS TONIGHT IN VIOLIN CONCERT

The Morgan-Stephens Conservatory of Music will open formally for the season tonight at 8 o'clock with a recital by Donald Kissane, violinist, a new member of the faculty, assisted by Miss Aileen Stephens, pianist.

Mr. Kissane comes to Atlanta from Newark, Ohio, and is a former member of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra under the great Ysaye's conductors. He comes to the Morgan-Stephens conservatory from Cornell college, Iowa, and has taken up his work here as first assistant violin instructor and conductor of orchestra classes in the Morgan-Stephens conservatory.

At this recital tonight Miss Aileen Stephens will make her last appearance before leaving to take up advanced studies at Oberlin college and conservatory at Oberlin, Ohio.

Mr. Kissane's concert will begin promptly at 8 o'clock and is open to the public. To reach the conservatory take Piedmont avenue car to Eleventh street.

Champion Patter To Display Art At Fiddle Tilts

"Big Herman" Davenport, of Ellijay, will make his debut tonight at the southern fiddling championship contest, to begin at the auditorium at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Davenport is not a fiddler. Fiddlers are plentiful in Georgia, but Mr. Davenport is an artist without a rival. He is acknowledged to be the champion patter of Georgia.

As all who have attended a fiddling convention know, fiddling would be like jazz minus a banjo without its accompaniments of straw-busting and patting. And "Big Herman" Davenport, champion patter of Georgia, puts his hands in a fiddle accompaniment which gives all the effect of three kinds of trap drums and provides that wild, barbaric background which makes even a one-legged man arise in his seat and do a buck and wing dance.

Tonight and tomorrow afternoon and night promise to bring the greatest assemblage of fiddlers and their friends who ever gathered for a fiddling tournament, for it will be the first real all-southern fiddling match in history. Of Georgia championships there have been 11, but never before have the famous fiddlers of Alabama and the Carolinas, Tennessee and Florida been invited to send their best to fiddle a tune against such Georgia crackles as Land Norris and Gid Tanner and their fellows.

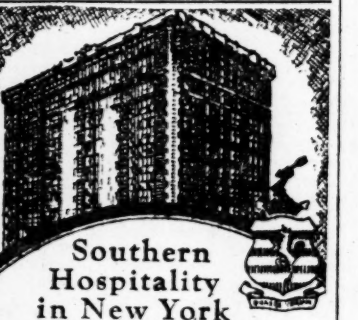

From mountain and seacoast the Georgia fiddlers will rally to defend the championship title and every off the cash prize which goes to the winner. Entries have been pouring in upon Virgil W. Sheppard, secretary of the Georgia Old-Time Fiddlers' convention, until he has had no time to do anything else but record them in the official book.

That the auditorium will be thronged at all three performances, tonight, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and tomorrow night, goes without saying. Atlantans always turn out by thousands to hear the fiddlers, while hundreds of devotees of fiddle music and country dancing flitter in from the surrounding counties. The night sessions will begin at 8 o'clock, and will be followed by square dances, open to all, with the Bull Fiddle band, of Lindale, providing the music.

LIQUOR IS CAPTURED AFTER WILD PURSUIT

A wild automobile chase of more than two miles on the Mayson-Turner road Thursday morning ended in arrest of a man who gave as his name C. D. Johnson and the capture of an expensive automobile, 96 gallons of corn whiskey and several quarts of whiskey bearing "bottled in bond" labels.

The arrest was made by County Officers Vinson and Allen, who reported that after chasing the liquor car for several miles, the driver stopped his car and surrendered. Johnson made bond for his appearance in court on a charge of violating the prohibition law.

Atlanta-Made Goods Gain $20,000,000 in 3 Years

An increase of approximately $20,000,000 in the value of products manufactured in Atlanta during the two-year period from 1923 to 1925 and a like increase in wage earnings for the city is shown in a report made by the bureau of census of the department of commerce and issued in Atlanta by Fred T. Newell, secretary of the industrial bureau of the chamber of commerce. The report also lists an increase of 4,000 wage earners in Atlanta for the period.

These figures are based on the manufacturers' returns to the department of commerce and are limited to Atlanta proper, exclusive of the metropolitan area.

Value of manufactured products made in Atlanta, as given by the report, was $141,054,750 in 1925, as compared with $122,284,202 in 1923, or a net gain of $18,770,548. Wages for 1925 are listed as $37,105,165 as compared with $16,115,500 in 1923, showing an increase of $20,989,665. In 1923 there were 16,005 wage earners in Atlanta and in 1925 there were 19,999, an increase of 3,994.

The number of establishments in the city decreased 22 as shown by the report of 425 in 1925 and 447 in 1923.

This falling off in the number of establishments was explained by Mr. Newell as being because of withdrawal of unsound and misplaced industries and cooperation and consolidation of others. The government report does not include small establishments producing $5,000 a year and less, of which

Deadlock Halts Hearing Of Bankers' Trust Matter

Federal court was recessed at noon Thursday when a deadlock was reached on authority as to whether all banks participating in the guarantee fund of the Bankers Trust company shall be required to be parties to the suit of the Bank of Homestead, Fla., for appointment of a receiver for the fund. The recess was ordered to give attorneys opportunity to clear up the question.

Judge Samuel H. Sibley, before whom the receivership suit is being tried, stated that he would render an opinion on the subject when the case is resumed Tuesday.

Attorneys defending W. D. Manley, president of the Bankers Trust company, contended that Judge Sibley is without jurisdiction because only one of the 134 banks participating in the fund is represented in the plan. Judge Orville Park, of Macon, attorney for the Georgia Bankers association and special attorney for the state banking department, contended that the Bank of Homestead had the right to sue alone.

The action seeks injunction to prevent dissipation of the fund, appointment of a receiver, an accounting and order making defendants liable for illegal dissipation of the fund. W. D. Manley, J. A. Sasser and other associates are defendants.

Allegations Set Out.
In the petition it is alleged that each bank paid in $2,702.70 to participate in the fund and was guaranteed protection to the sum of $25,000. The fund, the petition alleges, grew to $392,161 and in addition to that amount there was $70,000 in interest in the fund. It is admitted, however, that there have been losses to the fund.

Application to turn over the assets of the Georgia State bank and its 19 branches scattered over the state to the depositors will be made to the judge of the Fulton county superior court within the next few days, officials of the state banking department announced Thursday. The Georgia State bank and its branches closed its doors early this summer following failure of the Bankers Trust company of Atlanta.

At the reorganization meeting here Wednesday representatives of the 20 units of the Georgia State bank voted

Variety of Stamps Received on Plane Bringing Air Mail

Ambitious stamp collectors harvest of the largest crop of cancelled stamps of any single mail late Wednesday afternoon, it was learned Thursday from K. K. Large, Atlanta postmaster, when the plane, "Miss Atlanta," arrived at Candler field from Florida on its initial air mail trip.

More than 2,000 envelopes with every conceivable variety of stamps fixed to them were received in the shipment Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Large stated, and will be held until they are sent for by various stamp collectors.

One collector had probably 500 letters with various kinds of stamps on them which made the initial trip from Florida, it was stated.

Stamp collectors stated Thursday that the various cancelled stamps are quite valuable, especially since they bear cancellation showing they were sent in the first mail plane from points in Florida to Atlanta.

big W. A. Day store at 65 South Broad street, the store at the old location on Whitehall being discontinued.

The Broad street store, a three-story building, has been thoroughly remodeled and equipped with new and modern fixtures throughout, making it one of the handsomest as well as the most conveniently arranged credit clothing stores in the entire south.

"An ever-increasing volume of business made it imperative that we look for much larger quarters than our Whitehall store afforded, and we consider ourselves most fortunate in securing the big three-story building which is so conveniently located in the downtown section of Atlanta's retail trading area," stated Mr. Day.

"Absolutely everything that goes into the new store will be brand new—and that applies to stock as well as to fixtures and interior furnishings," continued Mr. Day. "I have determined to make this my permanent business home, and it being the parent store of my chain of credit clothing stores, I decided to make this the biggest and finest of its kind in the south."

In addition to the Atlanta store, Mr. Day operates stores in Chattanooga, Ga., Miami and Orlando.

LIBRARY SCHOOL BEGINS SESSIONS WITH 16 STUDENTS

The Atlanta Library school began its twenty-second session Thursday morning at 9 o'clock with an enrollment of sixteen students representing six states and twelve colleges and universities.

The school is affiliated with Emory university, the university recognizing the work of the school as a fifth year of college work and awarding its certificate for completion of the work.

There are now about 150 graduates of the school employed in fifteen states and two foreign countries.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION PRESENT 'PINAFORE'

The Atlanta Young People's Service League union, which includes leagues in the six Atlanta Episcopal churches, Kirkwood, College Park, Decatur and Marietta churches, will present "Pinafore" or "The Lass That Loved a Sailor," a nautical comic opera by Gilbert and Sullivan, with three performances, tonight at 8:15 o'clock, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and Saturday night at 8:15 o'clock, at Edgemoor hall, corner of North avenue and West Peachtree street.

The play is under direction of Miss Helen Battle, who has directed several plays previously presented by this organization, notably "Gypsy Rover" and "Cherry Blossom."

Miss Doris Martin is general chairman of the production; Leal Scheff, treasurer; Francis Plumb, ticket chairman, and Miss Catherine Abbott, publicity chairman.

Proceeds of this activity are to go to the Christmas charity fund of the Atlanta Young People's Service League union. Last year a Christmas tree, with dolls, toys, candy and fruit were given to one thousand little children of Atlanta who otherwise would have had but little of the Christmas spirit and it is anticipated that a similar work will be performed this year with the proceeds from this play.

Those taking leading roles are Francis P. Newman, Miss Catherine L. Abbott, Francis W. Plumb, Norman W. Beane, G. Hall Taylor, Miss Doris Martin, Miss Constance Pearson and R. A. Glover.

The ballet is composed of Misses Christine Wolfe, Harriett Brown, Hazel Wolfe, Isabel Frye, Sophie Lashaw, Laurie Linthicum, Nana Wolfe and Dorothy Chiles.

In the chorus are Misses Josephine R. Reid, Georgia Pepper, Billie Linthicum, Grace Holding, Willie Williams, Fay Hatcher, Florence Graham, Mary Alexander, Frances Anderson and Bob McKendrick.

Specialties between acts will be a dance by little Miss Jaqueline Gullatt and a drum specialty by little Master Thomas Wood.

LITTLE SPACE LEFT FOR FAIR ENTRIES

Commercial exhibit entries at the Southeastern fair, October 2-9, will close Monday and any space remaining open then will be assigned for additional educational displays by schools and other educational institutions, it was announced Thursday by Oscar Mills, vice president and general manager of the fair.

The number and size of exhibits by southern merchants and manufacturers is larger this year than ever before in the history of the Southeastern fair, Mr. Mills said, and less commercial space will be left Monday for reassignment than in any previous year, not excepting the boom years of 1918 and 1919.

"The fair association is especially grateful for the unusually generous support from Atlanta merchants and manufacturers," Mr. Mills stated. "They have responded most generously to the opportunity to represent the business life of Atlanta to the hundreds of thousands of visitors who will come here for the fair from other cities and they are spending more money and taking more pains to make their displays really in keeping with the educational spirit of the fair."

Proceeds from the sale of space in exhibition buildings which is not required for other exhibits contributes a substantial part of the cost of the program and the free entertainment program offered at the fair, Mr. Mills said.

"It would be impossible to stage a truly great fair on the revenue from admissions at the gate alone," Mr. Mills explained, "because the reason the fair attracts great numbers from great distances is because it gives them 15 to 20 times the value of their money in entertainment as well as in instruction and information. She Wants to Grow Up with a Perfect Foot

BUT she knows absolutely nothing about the structure of her foot, how the bones will be forced out of alignment by poorly designed shoes, how the arch muscles will fail if circulation and exercise are restricted.

Why shouldn't parents tell their children that the foot is a muscular structure, resilient and shock-absorbing through its 26 small bones arranged in the form of flexible arches?

Nature, too, wants the young foot to stay perfect. It would if it could go through life barefooted on soft ground. City life demands footwear. The nearest approach to Nature is the Cantilever Shoe, made now for Misses and Children on a last that fits splendidly and keeps the foot in correct shape. A flexible arch allows foot freedom, good circulation and strengthening exercise of the foot muscles.

Girls who wear Cantilever Shoes have the best chance of growing up with perfect feet.

AUGHERTY'S TRIAL APPROACHES CRISIS

New York, September 16.—(AP)—The trial of Harry M. Daugherty and Thomas W. Miller moved toward a crisis today.

For seven days the government has been into the record oral and documentary evidence admitted subject to objection. Today, the seventh day of the trial, additions were made to a mass of exhibits that brought the trial up to 90, with some of the exhibits containing hundreds of type-written pages. Checks, railroad vouchers, hotel registers, letters and hotel register sheets are included in the exhibits.

Twenty witnesses, a number of them from distant cities, have testified, eight gave testimony today. Aside from specific objections, the testimony virtually all the witnesses has been admitted subject to proof of connection.

Will Connect Testimony.

Either tomorrow or Monday, government attorneys vouchsafed, the attempt will be made to connect the testimony already given, to show that Daugherty and Miller conspired with a late Jesse W. Smith, former aide of the former attorney general, and John T. King, late republican committeeman from Connecticut, to defraud the government of "intelligent and useful services."

Daugherty and Miller, the government alleges, participated in a conspiracy to pay fraudulently to the United States four values of $7,000,000 of the impounded shares of the American Metal company, which were seized during the war under the trading with the enemy act. Richard Merton, German metal magnate, previously testified he had King a total of $411,000 as commissions for aiding him in obtaining funds of the impounded shares.

John D. Durkin, secretary to King for several years before his death, was recalled today for cross examination.

Two checks for $25,000 each made out by King to Daugherty were examined by Durkin as contributions to deficit in the republican campaign in Ohio. He testified the checks bore the notation "deficit Ohio republican party." These cancelled checks disappeared from King's office some time between March and June of this year, he said.

Identifies Checks.

When counsel for Miller had completed cross-examination, Durkin was questioned by Assistant United States Attorney Simpson, he identified three checks totaling $251,437.50. One of the checks was for $25,000 and was signed by King and payable to Smith. Another check signed by King and payable to "cash" was offered in evidence. Durkin could not remember having seen it before. These checks were dated October 15, 1921, 13 days after the day Merton said he gave King $250,000 in Liberty loan bonds.

The government alleged that these two checks represented coupon or interest value on Liberty loan bonds amounting to $125,000. Durkin testified he had deposited Liberty loan bond coupons on King's account.

The third check was for $25,000 and was dated August 1, 1921. It bore the signature of King and was payable to "cash." The date of the check approximated the date on which Merton said he gave King $50,000 as a retainer.

After a long dispute the check was barred as an exhibit.

TUMLIN MURDER SUSPECT JAILED

Under Chief George Mathieson and the solicitor Thursday spent practically the entire day in questioning neighbors of the dead woman and in bringing witnesses to the solicitor's office where they made signed statements.

Solicitor Boskin can take three actions on the habeas corpus proceedings. Just what he will do with the demand could not be learned Thursday afternoon. The habeas corpus proceedings will force him to show cause why Tumlin should be held. The solicitor can swear out a warrant charging murder against Tumlin; can appeal to the court to hold him until after the grand jury investigates the case. If this will not necessitate holding him in jail another day, or the grand jury may return an indictment against Tumlin.

Arrested in Wilcox County.

Silvey was taken in custody by Wilcox county officers charged with cursing Mrs. J. I. Whitaker on the highway between Abbeville and Fitzgerald Tuesday. Officers state that the prisoner had something on his shoes that looked like blood, and after reading of the Tumlin murder in The Constitution they communicated with Fulton county officers stating that they might have the murderer.

Silvey emphatically denies any connection with the slaying, stating that he left Atlanta Tuesday night about 10:30 o'clock. He declared that he did not know a murder had been committed. The spots on his shoes, according to his statement to officers, were paint blotches.

Solicitor Investigates.

Solicitor Boskin, accompanied by Chief Mathieson and Captain John Oliver, Thursday morning made a minute inspection of every object within the Tumlin home, where the body of Miss Tumlin was found, in an effort to throw some light on the murder.

Assisting in taking statements from neighbors of the Tumlins were Assistant Solicitors Ed A. Stephens and John H. Hudson, Captain Oliver and Lieutenant Butler, of the county police force. Special investigators George Pounds and Fred Stephens have been assigned to the case from the solicitor's office to cooperate with county authorities.

Offers to Help.

Among the witnesses who appeared at the solicitor's office Thursday to offer assistance in aiding officials to obtain new clues in the investigation was T. Josh King, a railroad switchman, who lives on Howell Mill road, whose contemplated marriage to Miss Tumlin was revealed Wednesday at the corner's inquest. Sensational developments are expected in the murder investigation at an early date, as soon as the testimony of witnesses is released by Solicitor Boskin.

GASOLINE LEAK HOLDS UP FONCK

Westbury, N. Y., September 16.—(AP)—Ill luck, which has shadowed the Sikorsky biplane 8-35 in several guises, has caused another postponement of its scheduled hop-off on the projected non-stop flight from New York to Paris.

After a leak in one of the gasoline tanks had caused a last-minute postponement of the hop-off this morning, the date for departure was reset for tomorrow morning, only to be postponed a few hours later when government weather reports were received, telling of threatening storms over the Grand Banks off Newfoundland.

Officials in charge of the flight arrangements also said it was unlikely that a start could be made Saturday, because of the weather outlook. The leak that prevented the flight today was caused by a hole the size of a pencil. The plane already had been taken from its hangar to the field and final preparations for the start were nearly complete when the leak was discovered.

The storm warning which caused postponement of tomorrow's proposed take-off, said that east-northeast winds probably reaching gale force were expected in the area of the Grand Banks tomorrow and Saturday. A conference of the officials will be held tomorrow afternoon to determine whether a hop-off will be ventured Saturday.

It will be necessary to wait for a high "cleared out" area over the north Atlantic beyond the Grand Banks. The leak, mechanics of the plane said, could be repaired in a few minutes after the gasoline tank affected had been drained.

Igor Sikorsky, builder of the plane, was visibly affected by the sudden break of bad luck that prevented the start this morning. This flight will prove the practicability of the type of plane he has evolved after years of designing, hampered by lack of financial support.

Captain Rene Fonck, commander of the flight, took today's mishap cheerfully. He laughed and chatted with reporters, showing them a gold key which Mr. Sikorsky had given him to lock up the plane on the start to Paris.

A test flight probably will be made tomorrow.

THREE ARE INDICTED IN S. C. BANK CASE

Columbia, S. C., September 16.—(AP)—W. W. Bradley, state bank examiner, and two officials of the American Bank & Trust Co., of Columbia, which was closed in June, were charged with conspiracy and alleged violations of the state banking laws by the Richland county grand jury in a presentment made today.

Ivy M. Mauldin, president, and J. Pope Matthews, chairman of the board, were recommended for indictment on several different charges, separately and together, while Bradley was named with the two officials for alleged violations of the banking code.

G RINGLING CIRCUS COMES NOVEMBER 1

One of the world's largest traveling shows will soon be here and for the time circus patrons will find five rings of new displays instead of three. The Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined circus, the circus will come to Atlanta Monday, November 1. With the addition last winter of two performing horses to bring the total to 250, the problem presented to the Ringling brothers was how to handle five troupes of horses in a single display. So the Ringlings have had two massive wooden rings constructed on the tops of steel-structure stands. This is the greatest innovation since the Ringling brothers started their super circus, and by combining with the Barnum & Bailey circus, it is said, has opened the way not only for increased horse numbers, but also for the augmentation of other circus exhibitions.

Though there are more than 500 men and women artists stars on the program of 1920, only a few of the most brilliant will be presented singly. They will be seen in imposing numbers, in groups extending over the length of the arena—seven, nine, and many as eleven troupes in action at the time. Five herds of elephants will be presented instead of three. A hundred clowns will cavort and caper in parts of the circus. The hippo-come track will be used more than ever before. At one time, it is claimed, 250 trained horses, each ridden by an expert, in an amazing equine ballet, the "Cavalade of the Gardens." It is filled with glittering acrobats, with acrobats, high school athletes and thoroughbreds that give exhibitions of hazardous high jumps.

Big parades were in evidence Monday. Miller Huggins sent 18 Yankees against the Tigers in the first game of a double header but lost the decision. Pittsburgh threw 20 against the Giants in the same day and also lost.

"MY LIFE STORY"

Written by Rudolph Valentino

FAMOUS CASINO SHOCKS HIM BY ITS TAWDRINESS

Rudolph Valentino in this installment of his own intimate life story tells of his revision in the gambling salons of Deauville.

"Tired men," he writes. "Desperate men. Men at that very moment contemplating suicide. Lives embittered and thrown away—all for the lust of gold!"

And he tells about the women patrons "Women thinking they were pleasing some man—their faces painted and hardened, pitifully striving faces."

"Rather poverty than riches at such a price,"

The "Great Lover" tells his very heart emotions.

"One of the saddest and truest cries in all the world," he confesses, "is the cry of the Arab, when he says 'Only God and I know what is in my heart.'"

Don't miss this soul-inspired chapter of the innermost thoughts of "The Sheikh."

(Copyright, 1920, by The Constitution.)

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

That first morning we breakfasted late, and about 10 o'clock a thin, watery sort of sun came reluctantly forth as if to say, "Well, I'm here, but I'm only going to tease you, not please you."

Herbert suggested we take a ride and see some of the country, and that is what we did.

We had a marvellous ride through that incomparable, picturesque, historic Normandy countryside, so highly and diversely luscious in poetry and prose by the many and the great who have known and loved it.

At noon we came to a road house perched on a mountain, from which point of vantage we could see the whole panorama of the coast and the particular spot where Romen, the Norman conqueror, landed, and left, which William the Conqueror.

Lunch in Open.

We had luncheon there, lingering with wine of the country and delicious food—especially delicious to us, because we were tired of hotel cookery—and then we motored back to be in time for dinner at the celebrated Casino.

Natasha and I were quite thrilled about going to the Casino.

Natasha arrived herself in her most gorgeous Poiret creation. "Poiret paradoxes," I call them, because their simplicity is so confounded with their quality of seductiveness. Which is the nth degree of perfection in a woman's gown—or anything else, for that matter.

To allure, to attract without seeming to do so, without resorting to that favorite American word, the "obvious," what greater art is there than that? Poiret fashions fascinations out of textures and colors. He places a soul in silk. And he does the final and consummate thing in making beautiful women even more beautiful than they were before they went to him. That is not only art, it is a benediction to the race.

Dinner at Casino.

Well, and so arrayed, we betook ourselves to the Casino, thinking to be dazzled by the fair women and exquisitely tailored men.

It was uninteresting.

The people were most uninteresting.

There were no smart women. Literally none at all. There were no smart men. There was not even that aura, that atmosphere of the ultra-sophisticated, the ultra-smart, that we had so confidently looked forward to seeing.

The people were mostly tourists who had come there, no doubt, on the same

Speakers from the men's division of the Gordon campaign committee addressed ward rallies of women in the fourth and ninth wards Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

A representative group of women assembled at the home of Mrs. Marie Delgar, on North Boulevard to make plans for furthering Mr. Gordon's candidacy for mayor and to lay plans for an intensive drive in that section.

Mrs. Hazel Harrison and Mrs. A. L. Petit urged the women to continue their work.

More than fifty women, including representatives from the churches and schools in that vicinity, met in the ninth ward at the home of Mrs. L. L. Boyer on Duval place.

Mrs. Albert Howell, Sr., announced a meeting of women of the seventh ward this morning at 10:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. J. Killian, 1552 South Gordon street.

Women of the eighth ward will meet at the home of Mrs. C. C. Harding, 78 Clemon drive, Mrs. Alrice Taylor and Mrs. Frank Nadele have assisted in arrangements for this meeting.

Candidates for city offices have been invited to attend a political rally which will be held at 8 o'clock Friday night at the Highland Avenue school. George W. Powell, candidate for board of education from the ninth ward; I. N. Raggsdale, R. A. Gordon, L. N. Huff, C. M. Ford and Allen M. Couch, candidates for mayor, have been invited to speak at the meeting.

POLITICAL SPEAKING AT HIGHLAND SCHOOL

Did you know that the progress or decline of a patient often depends on the purity of the drugs with which a doctor's prescription is filled and the conscientious care with which these drugs are compounded?

We have but one standard by which we compound drugs. They must be the best and purest made, and their compounding in strictest accordance with your doctor's prescription.

We want to tell you this, for it is so satisfying to know that the medicines prescribed for your restoration have been prepared just as your physician intended and with the purest drugs the market affords.

mission of curiosity that had brought our disappointed selves.

They were talking and laughing in loud voices, trying to make for themselves the gay and abandoned time they had thought to find ready-made.

Fifth Avenue Smarter.

Any day on Fifth Avenue, any evening in any cafe in London, strolling in by the sheerest coincidence, I have found smarter looking women and more correct and "at ease" looking men.

Poor Herbert seemed to feel that he was somehow responsible for the badly dressed women and the poorly served food.

Doubtless, Deauville is much like place in New York. One winter Ritz will be the place. Another winter it will be the Biltmore, the Ambassador, the Savoy places, such as Pierre's and the Avignon and so on. I am much like sheep. One goes and the others follow.

I sometimes wonder, by way of a slight though not irrelevant digression, why people who do not have to think so much of dress, who ought not to think so much of dress, and who do not achieve results when they do dress, spend so much heart-breaking time and money on it.

Ruined By Vanity.

So many men, good men, too, have gone down into debt and disgrace by please some woman who would have looked far more charming in a simple gingham frock than in the silks and jewels her misplaced vanity demanded.

There is a virtue in a weed quite as much as in an orchid. And there is beauty in a weed, too, if it is growing rank and sweet, in its own surroundings and not trying to insert itself into some priceless cloisonne, where an orchid should be placed.

If you have the cloisonne, well and good. Then you will dwell in it gracefully and rightfully, fulfilling your destiny in the place appointed for you.

But if you were born by the country roadside, why break your heart about it, with the result that you are neither the sweet-smelling garden flower nor yet the aristocratic orchid?

Tragic Faces.

Sometimes when I have spent an evening in such a place as the Casino here at Deauville, where I have seen the spent and wearied and tragic-smitten faces of the men, the hardened, painted, pitifully striving faces of the women, I think how much better it really is to be the humble blade of grass that knows the pulse of the earth, the warmth and nourishment of natural surroundings that ask so little and give so much, rather than a transplanted flower growing unhealthy, fully out of its native soil.

Rather life, I think, than a semblance of life!

Rather poverty accepted gracefully than riches at the price of health and happiness!

For after all money is a hollow thing unless it is buying a dream.

And dreams are so priceless that when one is living a dream money ceases to be a figure. Dreams cannot be bought.

Most of this wandering thought comes to me as I sit and think of the faces I saw there in the Casino.

Women Unhappy.

The faces of some of the women—painted and hardened, set in lines of laughter, forced and unnatural. Women who would have been far happier, had they but known it, at home by some simple place tending their plants and flowers, watching their babies grow up, gossiping with their neighbors for excitement.

Women who didn't belong at Deauville—and who were trying so desperately hard to believe they did, and inwardly being miserable. Perhaps some of them were acting so to please some man.

Or because they thought that they were pleasing some man.

Some of them had money—and no dream.

Heart a Mystery.

And that thought, they had been told, that this was "the thing to do" when one has money. If people could only be taught to read their own hearts, to know what is in their hearts, in all the world is the cry of the Arab, when he says, "Only God and I know what is in my heart."

And the men there. Dead dreams staring from their hollow eyes, like so many ravaged ghosts.

Tired men. Desperate men. Men at that very moment contemplating suicide. Men to whom life could have been sweet and sound, but who had soured it and embittered it for the lust of gold.

Don't miss the "Great Lover's" installment of his heart-biting romance tomorrow. He sets down in his own words the tragedy of the gambling tables. Where life and honor die with death. The puppets of the game—both men and women. The chapter tells what Natasha's reactions are to it all—tinsel and gold and the blackened end. Don't miss tomorrow's paper.

FAIR SCHOOL PRIZE EVENT OPEN TO ALL

Schools competing for a share of the prizes offered in the educational department of the Southeastern fair October 2 to 9 this year, will have an equal chance regardless of size or location. It was announced Thursday by Dr. Willis A. Sutton, Atlanta school superintendent, who is chairman of the department.

The fair association has posted $1,000 in prizes for the best school exhibits with four prizes running from $10 to $100 in each of six different divisions of the school contest.

Prizes will be awarded for the four best elementary school exhibits from cities of more than 5,000 population; for the four best exhibits from county schools or towns of less than 5,000 population; for the four best high school exhibits from cities of more than 5,000; for the four best high school exhibits from counties or from towns of less than 5,000 population; for the four best junior high school exhibits; for the four best high school departmental exhibits.

The departments eligible to compete in the last named group include household arts, home economics, shops or manual training, commercial training, drawing or commercial art and agriculture.

Exhibits are to be judged on the basis of educative value, neatness, accuracy and artistic display.

Competent judges who are not personally interested in any of the competing exhibits will select the winners. The division of the contest into six different groups, putting small town and county schools in a class by themselves, gives every school in the state a fair chance for winning in its own class, was pointed out by Oscar Mills, vice president of the fair.

A. M. E. CHURCH HOLDS
"HOME-COMING WEEK"

"Home Coming Week" is being held at Turner Chapel, A. M. E. church, Marietta, in celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of the chapel this week. The Rev. Calvin Johnson, pastor, is in charge of the celebration. J. W. Dore, W. A. Fountain, Calvin Johnson, and C. L. Williams.

Turner Chapel was purchased in 1853 by the A. M. E. congregation from the white congregation. Later it was used as a hospital for wounded soldiers of the war between the states, the government several years ago paying a claim for this service of the church.

The negro congregation bought the chapel through the encouragement of the white Methodist ministers, who preached every Sunday afternoon to the early congregations.

Turner Chapel's congregation, it was said Thursday, has always been regarded as faithful to the tenets of Methodism, and has always fashioned the patterns of their homes along this line, with the result that the children have never departed from their wholesome religious instruction.

Among those who have served Turner chapel faithfully are included the following names: Bishop H. M. Turner, "Uncle" Joe Wood, Henry Strickland, E. A. Shepherd, Burgess Johnson, I. S. Hamilton and J. R. Warner, and the pastors: J. H. Hall, the Rev. Strickland, J. T. Beltsaw, J. A. Jolley, I. N. Fitzpatrick, J. L. Butler, J. H. Robinson, J. S. Downs, J. W. Dore, W. A. Fountain, Calvin Johnson, and C. L. Williams.

It is doubtful if there is a pitcher in the game who has seen more hits whiz by this season than Lewis Pallas, of Lincoln in the Western league. Pallas has been in 59 games for a total of 322 innings and 406 hits have been made off of him. The runs total 217.

—said Christopher Columbus, dreamer who dared the threat of the unknown to make a dream come true.

"It can be done," has echoed down the years, the watchword of the land he found.

Of this land, Hendrik Willem Van Loon tells us in his "America, An Episode in the History of the World," beginning in the October Companion.

The brilliant author of "The Story of Mankind" and "Tolerance" makes plain to us by word and picture that history is no stirring of the dull dust of ages, but a re-creation of living men and women; of the hopes and fears; of the vision and sacrifice; of the bitter failure and glorious achievement that have all gone into the building of this land we proudly call our own.

More absorbing than fiction, more dramatic than the theater are the tragedy and comedy of a nation in the making—America!

Three outstanding serials by Margaret Deland, Mark Lee Luther and Grace S. Richmond. Brilliant short stories by Sherwood Anderson, Zona Gale, Elsie Singmaster, Victor McClure and Grace Torrey.

Feature articles, gravure pages, and all the fashion, beauty, service and home departments which have made the Companion the most distinguished and authoritative publication in its field.

HOLDER REPLIES TO DR. HARDMAN

Cornelia, Ga., September 16.—(Special.)—John N. Holder made the following statement here today in connection with his candidacy for governor:

"Dr. Hardman's statement from Commerce shows him to be the artful dodger of the campaign. The people of Georgia are not interested in what was advocated in 1923 and in 1924, but they are very much interested in what will be done in the future.

"My position has been for the last two sessions of the legislature and is today unequivocally against a state bond issue. I have joined with thousands of other Georgians in the belief that since the legislature has generously given us a 2 1/2-cent gas tax, which in 1927, with federal and county funds, will give us approximately ten million dollars for construction, that no bond issue is necessary.

"What is your opinion of this great economic question, Dr. Hardman? Why are you so strangely reticent? Why so unwilling to state your position? Why take all the devices known methods to keep from answering? Why your studied attempt to muddy the water? Will not the governor and your political advisers of your machine allow you even to have an opinion?

"Questions Hardman. "You say in your statement: 'As governor I would do no more to do with the subject of bonds than I would with the settlement of foreign obligations. I would not assume to influence the legislature in a matter with which the governor has nothing whatsoever to do.'

"I have not yet heard of a governor of Georgia who ever tried to handle our foreign obligations. In fact, I did not know that the state of Georgia had foreign obligations, but I have seen through the press that the presidents of the United States have clear-cut opinions about foreign obligations and would a tremendous influence in their settlement. "You have admitted, with becoming modesty, in your advertisements that you are a great business man, and yet, on the greatest economic question that has faced our people since the civil war, you have no opinion at all upon a state bond issue. Why the need then, doctor, of any opinion? You are stating you shall recommend either legislation. What have you to do with this other legislation?

"Your view as to the governor's part in a bond issue is not shared by the chief of your political machine, because we have seen him as governor of Georgia, in this present year spend $125,000 of the taxpayers' money in an attempt to pass a state bond issue of $95,000,000. Unquestionably he thought a governor had something to do with a bond issue.

"This is too thin an evasion. Be honest with the people of Georgia, doctor, and tell them that special interests, reactionary politicians and all those who would fatten off the exploitation of the state's credit, are behind you, for they know where you stand if the people do not, and you dare not face the issue.

"Asks About Trades. "You say that my statement about 'trades' is all balderdash. If so, why did you, without any charge having been made, rush into print to deny 'trades'? Of course, you have not denied, and you cannot deny that at the very outset of his campaign you offered to 'trade' with me. You promised to reappoint me chairman of the highway board if I would get out of your way for governor. You promised me in the presence of John Shannon, of Commerce, your home town, a man whose word is as good as his bond, and you urged innumerable other people to help remove me from the race with the promise that you would reappoint me chairman of the highway board.

"Everybody in Georgia knows that there was a complete understanding in the first primary between yourself and J. O. Wood and George Carswell. Now everybody knows that as soon as the first primary was over, you made a new understanding with J. O. Wood and George Carswell. "Why not take the people into your confidence, doctor, about the promises you have made as to the chairmanship of the highway board? The people are entitled to know."

LAKE PARK CALLED MOTOR SPEEDWAY

sneeders and violators of motor car laws. The Florida chamber statement says motorists going to and from Florida are being "milked" and that enormous sums of money are being collected by Lake Park officials through excessive fines for various alleged offenses.

Motorists Warned. Motorists also are being warned to take an Alabama route into Florida or to go via Waycross into Lake City, Fla., to avoid passing through Lake Park.

Governor Walker said Thursday that he had been advised of the criticism and complaint of the Florida chamber and that he had written prominent citizens of Valdosta and that section to investigate charges and conditions and advise him. To date, he said, he had not received replies from any of those persons.

Mayor Godwin, of Lake Park, emphatically denied the charges in toto Thursday in a statement published in a Valdosta paper. The Constitution learned. It was pointed out, however, that a petition was being circulated Thursday in Lake Park asking removal from office of the traffic officer in Lake Park.

How to stop BOILS!

There's only one way to stop boils. Stop the cause of boils! That's common sense—isn't it? All right. Boils thrive because the blood gets so weak in healthy, red cells that it can't throw off the impurities that get into the body. There's not enough rich, red blood to purify the system.

Now—S. S. S. builds back the blood to fighting strength. S. S. S. builds red-blood-cells—builds them by the millions! Boils dry up! S. S. S. is the thing. Impurities that cause boils and other skin eruptions can't stand up against the rich, healthy, red blood that S. S. S. builds. That's all there is to it.

Stop boils with S. S. S. It's the way. Get it at any drugist. The larger bottle is more economical. It is extravagant to pay 40% more for a ginger ale that is not as good as RED ROCK. Keep your money in Atlanta by buying RED ROCK GINGER ALE. Made in Atlanta for 41 years.

after the evangelist's disappearance, to show that it was no Mrs. McPherson who occupied the cottage and revelations by Miss Bernice Morris, that Money had been paid from the temple in an apparent effort to manufacture evidence supporting the kidnapping story.

Investigation developed some time ago that the radio operator rented the cottage at Carmel four days before Mrs. McPherson disappeared and reached it at 3 o'clock in the morning, with a begoggled woman, 13 hours after the evangelist disappeared from sight at Ocean Park last May. The woman spent ten days at the cottage. When Mrs. McPherson broadcast an appeal to Ormiston, who was then in hiding, to clear her name in connection with reports that she was his companion at the cottage, a Chicago attorney forwarded an affidavit by the radio operator declaring that the woman was not Mrs. McPherson, but a mysterious "Miss X."

The state chamber has received promises of cooperation from the Bainbridge, Ga., Chamber of Commerce, which has communicated with the mayor of Lake Park, the Cairo (Ga.) Chamber of Commerce, the Tift county Board of Trade, the Thomasville (Ga.) Chamber of Commerce, which characterizes the Lake Park situation as "intolerable," and the Valdosta Chamber of Commerce.

"The Valdosta chamber has informed the Florida organization that in its opinion the Lake Park situation has been 'greatly magnified,' it has interested itself in the problem and that citizens of the village are insisting that the officers use due discretion and proper courtesy toward travelers.

The Florida chamber today reported its warning to motorists to beware of Lake Park and to avoid it if possible until there was definite assurance that the village would not go out of its way to molest travelers. Traffic from the north can safely move over the Dixie Highway from Macon via Waycross to Jacksonville while that from the west via Birmingham, Montgomery and Dothan can enter Florida at several points and move eastward over the Old Spanish Trail to Lake City."

CHARGES DENIED BY MAYOR GODWIN. Valdosta, Ga., September 16.—(Special.)—Mayor Godwin, of Lake Park, Ga., has issued through the columns of The Valdosta Daily Times an emphatic denial of the charge that motorists are held up, discriminated against or unjustly fined by Lake Park authorities. The mayor states that the speed limit through the town is 20 miles an hour but that the authorities are not holding travelers down to that speed, allowing them to make in the neighborhood of 35 miles an hour without molestation or fines. It is only when the latter speed is exceeded, so the mayor says, that travelers are stopped. He states that the highway is liberally supplied with signs warning motorists of the speed limit, and that the regulations imposed by the town authorities were for self-protection and the safeguarding of lives.

On the other hand there have been numerous complaints for several weeks of alleged unwarranted activities by the traffic authorities of Lake Park. These complaints are probably greatly exaggerated. It is stated today that a petition is being circulated by Lake Park citizens requesting the mayor to remove the traffic cop now on duty and rescind the present regulations.

PERJURY CHARGES IN CHOIR MYSTERY

ments yesterday in the Hall-Mills murder. Gorsline, testifying Wednesday before the grand jury here was describing a long, low man he heard while he and Miss Katherine Rastall were parked in an automobile in DelRussey's lane the night of the double murder, not far from the spot where the double slaying was committed.

Gorsline drew his index finger across his throat. "The gruesome picture seemed automatic, subconscious, something that arose out of the memory of the past. A grand juror leaned over to his feet. "What do you mean by that motion?" he called. "Did you see Mrs. Mills' throat cut?"

"No, no," Gorsline stammered. "I was just thinking about it." Mrs. Mills' throat was cut, according to post-mortem medical testimony, after she had died from the three pistol bullets fired into her head as though the cutting were an act of a mere fiendish rage.

There was no word of telling for a certainty whether her throat was cut before or after her lover, the Rev. Edward W. Hall, was slain and his body laid on the ground beside hers under a crab apple tree on the Phillips farm near New Brunswick.

PRIMARY RETURNS PLEASE COOLIDGE

Coolidge tried to make attorney general only to be rebuffed by the senate. Regulars Elected. Much has been said about the defeat of administration senators such as Penner of Pennsylvania; Stanfield of Oregon; and McKinley of Illinois. In all cases, however, they were replaced by nominees who can be expected to be as regular as their prod. sons if they are seated. Complications, however, have arisen in Oregon, where Stanfield is running as an independent candidate. This increases the chances of the democratic candidate, Bert E. Haney.

Whether this optimism is entirely justified is another question. On paper the senate situation looks a little factory to the administration. Yet it is almost inevitable that the insurgents will hold the balance of power and betting is even that the democrats will actually gain control. The house is regarded as safe for Coolidge.

He Leaves Saturday.

That is the situation at the end of the president's vacation. The executive offices are being dismantled and the presidential special will leave early Saturday morning and is due in Washington shortly before midnight. Many telegrams and telephone calls have come to the executive offices from cities along the train route through New York, asking the president to stop for brief speeches. Some of the appeals are so insistent that the president is being placed in an embarrassing position. The presidential train is scheduled to make the run to Washington in 15 hours, two hours under the normal running schedule. Frequent stops or even slowing down of the train as it passes through various cities will make it impossible for the president to get to the white house before early Sunday and he declares to delay the return. So far he has declined to make any speeches en route.

Bobby Jones Wins Over Evans; Meets Ouimet Today

Atlanta Star Wins In Gruelling Match; Von Elm Beats Gunn

His second shot dead to the pin, then failed by inches to down first putt, and while Bob could down his first putts either it did mean the same because they were only longer putts and usually did elude a remarkable recovery as Evans was forced to make many occasions.

His glorious triumph today does and the strife for Bobby Jones.

Now he must take the measure of Francis Ouimet, another veteran in amateur ranks who has defeated

him in amateur play before. Out-today defeated Freddie Wright by a margin of five and three and George Von Elm, who defeated Watts Gunn today and plays George Dawson tomorrow, is favored to meet Bobby in the finals Saturday, providing Bobby can take Ouimet.

To start the afternoon round today Bobby missed a 10-footer for a birdie and a win while Chick held his first putt for a par after being in trouble on his second shot.

This left Bobby but one up going to the green with their second shot, perfect fours and duplicated the feat on the third. Here again Bobby was putting for a birdie but the ball would not fall and he was forced to take a par and a half.

On the sixth, Evans' deadly short iron counted for a hole and he won with a par four, while Bobby was in trouble in his tee shot and his second shot was short, to require an approach and two putts. On this hole Evans made a scintillating recovery. He topped his second shot and the ball rolled short on the green and to the right, but his approach was within two feet of the pin for a four.

Chick left Bobby but one up going to the green with their second shot, perfect fours and duplicated the feat on the third. Here again Bobby was putting for a birdie but the ball would not fall and he was forced to take a par and a half.

On the tenth Chick had an opportunity to go in with a hole, but again his putt failed and they halved the hole in five. Both were in the traps at the eleventh and their second shots,

but while Bobby was 15 feet short of the pin on his third Chick was three feet from the pin. He missed the putt, however, and they halved.

Gallery Gasps.

The eleventh was halved in perfect fours and on the twelfth Bobby brought

a gasp from the gallery by rimming

the cup with his first putt, but it did not fall and both were three.

The thirteenth was halved in fours

and then on the fourteenth Bobby finally did what he had been threatening to do all day and dropped a long putt for a birdie three to win the hole. Bobby's tee shot faded to rough just off the fairway on the right and he pushed his second to the left of the green fully 50 feet from the pin. Several undulations marked the green between the ball and the cup

but the ball went straight and true to

The fifteenth went at par fours with

Bobby within 2 inches of the cup with his first putt, and then came the glorious sixteenth when the hopes of Chick

Evans winged their way across the hills of Baltusrol and Bobby Jones

again ended a match with the plaudits of the crowd ringing in his ears. On this hole Evans was in the trap with his tee shot and his chip shot was full

12 feet past the pin, but Bobby, who was safely on in one and within 1

foot of the cup with his first putt, conceded the long putt for a half and the match was ended—2 and 3.

Watts Gunn, who found his wildness and the stellar play of George von

Elm too much to conquer in the morning round, and turned the 18 six down to the Californian, went down to defeat by a score of 8 and 7 before the afternoon match had gone more than half the distance.

Watts did not need to win the match with von Elm to win the prize of the sporting world, for he downed the great Rudy Knepper, of Chicago, in one of the best matches of the tourney Wednesday afternoon. To begin the match with a par four, and then

Watts drove into trouble on the second hole with a par four and a half by winning the hole with a par five.

They halved the next four holes in perfect figures, but then on the seventh Watts pulled his tee shot to a trap and was unable to reach the green with his second. His third was over the green and his fourth was on, but

Short Hills, N. J., September 16.—A former king of golf staged a desperate rally here today and endeavored to oust the emperor of golf from his high estate.

It was a battle of Titans, a gruelling struggle between the only man who has won both the big American golf titles in one season and the man who now seems fairly assured of adding this honor to all the rest of the golfing world has given him.

But the attempted come-back of the mighty Chick, though valiant, was in vain and the 34th hole found Emperor Jones as usual a smiling victor by a score of 3 and 2.

Bobby Jones, who shot royal golf today, but the thing that thrilled the galloping herd of 6,000 to 8,000 fans was Evans' bulldogged threat that continued for 24 holes. Chick was out to regain his lost fame and with a bit more courage in sending his putts toward the cup, there might have been a different story to tell.

Three times on the first round did Chick miss short putts to win holes and in the afternoon time and again did he lay his maulish shots dead to the hole. He was short on his putt for a 74.

For the 34 holes in today's match Bobby was three under 4's and one under par. His morning round he played 70, two under par.

But even with that round Bobby was only two up at the end of the 18th.

Before the afternoon match was six holes old, Bobby had won another when Chick sliced his drive on the fifth.

Then Chick's maulish won the sixth.

von Elm was down in four to win the hole and make it 8 up.

Watts Brilliant.

Watts showed a burst of the brilliancy which marked his round Wednesday and it was his hole in one, a magnificent birdie two. Hoing a 10-foot putt to turn the trick but this rally was of no avail, and when they halved the next two holes in pars, the match was over.

The morning round was a superb round of golf from beginning to end and the fact that Bobby Jones was two up at the end of the 18 holes does not tell the story.

He turned the corner with a 34 to Evans' 38 and both came home in ten par. Bob for a 70 and Chick for a 74.

Evans who pressed the champion so closely in the morning but on two occasions Chick missed short putts, which would have meant holes for him.

The seventh placed Evans three down when Bob took a perfect par and the Californian sliced to a trap on the right and was short in the rough with his second. Chick conceded this hole to Bob and took a 74.

They went to the eighth tee with Bobby three up but here made the first real mistake of the game when his tee shot putted to a trap on the left and he was forced to play short of the green on his second. Chick was on in two and Bobby's third, while safely on, was not dead for a hole.

Both were safely on with their putts. He took a five and von Elm over par on his third and lost the hole to leave him two up going to the ninth.

Both were safely on the ninth with their tee shots and both took two putts to go down and halve the hole in par three. Bob for a 34, two under par, and Chick for a 38, two over par.

The tenth looked like a hole for Bob when Evans' tee shot sliced to the rough and his second was forced to the other rough, but here Chick showed a flash of the dogged golf which makes for fame on the links.

He laid his third and to his credit was down on the first putt for a par four to halve the hole with Bobby who was on in two and down in two.

Outside of these two misdeeds, which can be described in one word—perfect—for both players. All three holes were halved in par figures and neither was in trouble after the third hole.

The fourteenth should have been a hole for Evans but he failed in the crisis and it was halved at four.

Outside of these two misdeeds, the veteran amateur was playing a beautiful game, particularly with the irons.

First Start Good.

Both started the match by making flawless birdie fours on the first hole, but on the second Chick was in the rough at the right with his tee shot and his second was short of the green. Bobby was on with a drive and pitch, but 20 feet from the pin, and while Chick was struggling for his four Bob dropped his 20-footer for the best putt of the match and won the hole with a birdie three.

Chick also sliced his drive on the third and landed under a tree at the right of the fairway from where he was forced to send a low pitch shot short of the ditch in front of the green. Bob was safely on in two and down in two putts for a par four, so Evans conceded the hole leaving him two down going to the fourth tee. On the short fourth both were putting for birdies, but failed and took par three to halve the hole. Both were well past the pin on their tee shots.

The fifth was also halved in par figures, both taking fours with two good first shots and two putts. Bobby conceded the hole to Chick on every hole and his irons were cutting the pin beautifully. There was no question in the mind of any observer that Bobby Jones was "on his feet."

On the sixth Bobby was putting for a birdie, but the two-footer would not drop and he took a par for the half-hole with his opponent. On this hole Bob laid his drive fully 200 yards straight down the fairway.

Chick was in the rough with his tee shot but he laid the most beautiful iron shot of the match dead to the pin for a five-foot putt. Bob was on in two good shots, but not dead enough for a putt. It looked good for Chick, but his putting touch failed and he missed to halve the hole.

Almost the same situation arose on the 15th when Evans missed a six-footer for the hole after Bobby had given the gallery a thrill by rimming the cup with his 30-footer. They halved this hole at par.

Bob's tee shot on the 16th was safe on, but Chick was short of the green on the edge of a trap. His second shot, played with a cleek, was well high perfect and he laid the ball dead for a three-foot putt, but missed again after Bob had holed his second putt for a three.

Bobby Three Up.

This put Bobby three up and he started the 17th by pulling his

JACK STAGES SECRET BOUTS WITH BIG BILL

Atlantic City, N. J., September 16.

(AP)—Jack Dempsey's remodeled nose, in which he invested $10,000, went the way of all pugilistic noses today.

It lost blood for the first time, but it proved its shock absorbing strength.

Dempsey was stepping through a lively first round with Tommy Loughran when the Philadelphia 175-pounder suddenly crossed a right squarely to Dempsey's nose.

Within a few seconds blood began to trickle down the champion's lip, but he continued boxing, going another round with Loughran and two with Martin Burke.

He started off with a round masterly Frankie Carpenter, making his usual five rounds. The smash on the nose did not affect his breathing.

In his dressing room, the champion said with a grin:

"It only goes to show that my nose is human after all. Also, it convinced me that it can stand under a good shock. See, it's all O. K."

With that remark, Dempsey gave his nose a healthy twist to prove that nothing serious had happened to it.

Dempsey's left eye is nicely colored, purple and green with a tint of blue as a result of his workout with Loughran yesterday.

The disclosure that Dempsey had been indulging in strictly secret battling practice with Big Bill Tate, a 220-pound negro sparring partner, was too strong, so Bobby won that hole with a par 3.

On the tenth Chick's putt again failed when he had another chance to pick up a hole and they halved it in 5's.

The halves in par continued on the eleventh and twelfth and fourteenth when Bobby dropped a long putt. His drive stopped in the rough at the right and his second was on the green to the left, about 50 feet from the cup. It was that putt he sank and that putt he won the hole.

Bobby conceded Chick a half on the 15th taking a three-and-two win in this wise.

Evans' tee shot landed in a trap and his chip was 12 feet past the pin. Bobby was on in one and within a foot of the cup with his first putt.

Evans conceded Bobby the putt and Bobby conceded Chick the putt he probably wouldn't have made for the half.

drive to a trap at the left of the fairway. It was a hanging lie on the side of the bunker and he was forced to play safe short of the bunkers across the fairway. His third shot was a terrific brassie but it kicked to the left and found a bunker at the left of the green while Chick was left with a 74.

Evans' tee shot was short of the green and he was forced to play a 74. Bobby Jones, on the other hand, until the ball is down. His exposure shot of the trap was a first of the pin 10 feet and he dropped the putt for a par five. They halved the hole in five.

Both were tremendous drives from the 18th tee but Bob's second shot pulled to a bunker at the left of the green and his explosion shot was short of the green. Bobby was forced to lose the hole to Chick's beautiful birdie four. This ended the morning match with Bobby two up and 18 holes to go.

SACCO-VANZETTI HEARING NEAR END

BY JOHN T. MOUTOUX.

Dedham, Mass., September 16.—An attack on all persons praised by the defense and praise for all the persons attacked by the defense is the reply of the commonwealth of Massachusetts to Attorney William G. Thompson for a new trial for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted five years ago of double murder.

The prosecution's answer to the two-day argument of the defense was begun shortly before court's adjournment today by the young assistant district attorney, Dudley F. Ranney, who is in charge of the case for the commonwealth. He expects to conclude at the morning session Friday, after which Thompson will close the hearing with a brief rebuttal.

Judge Webster Thayer will take the motion for a new trial and Thompson's request for rulings on eight legal propositions under advisement. A decision is expected some time before the execution of Celestino Madeiros, set for October 27, so that he may be available in the event a new trial is granted.

In a belligerent manner Ranney, who is barely 30, began the speech he had been waiting for two days to deliver. "We have heard much during the last eight or nine hours about the rottenness of the commonwealth of Massachusetts," he said. "We have been accused of suppressing the truth. Each of these untruths cuts like the thrust of a bayonet. We are overwhelmed with sadness that such should be the method of the defense attack."

Ranney asserted his confidence in the judge and the belief that his honor would not be swayed "by the mob of people who might storm this courthouse and demand that Sacco and Vanzetti be freed. Your honor is not concerned with the opinion of people, but with the facts of the case."

SPORTS CLAIMING PLACE OF DUELING AND BEER DRINKING

New York, September 16.—Soccer, tennis and hand-ball are taking the place of dueling and beer drinking in German universities, according to six students who arrived today on the North German Lloyd liner Seydlitz. They are here for a year's study in various colleges under the auspices of the American-German students' exchange.

Sports are compulsory in German universities, they stated, and no one can win a degree without courses in physical training.

Dr. Walther Kayser, of Freiburg university, who will specialize in history at the University of Cincinnati, said German universities, with an enrollment greater than before the war, are recovering more rapidly than the general social structure, and that in politics the students are open-minded, being neither partisan republicans nor monarchists, but favorable to the system which proves best for the country.

I. N. Ragsdale To His Fellow Citizens of Atlanta:

I am a candidate for mayor in the primary of September 22nd. I have lived in Atlanta for forty-five years, spending my whole business life here and being identified with the development of the city for almost a half century. During all that time no man has ever attacked my personal character, nor doubted my integrity.

My first public service was as mayor of Oakland City before its incorporation into the City of Atlanta; after that I was elected as the first alderman from the newly-created ward, serving two terms in that capacity and one year as mayor pro tem of the City of Atlanta. Then retiring to the active pursuit of my business, after six years I was called by my people to serve as alderman for three years, serving the last year as mayor pro tem. I was then elected to the board of county commissioners and after a service of one and a half years I resigned to enter the contest for mayor.

As a member of council I served as chairman of the finance committee and it would ill become me to boast of my own record. The record speaks for itself and shows the remarkable advance made by the City of Atlanta during that administration.

Something has been said by my opponents about the administration of county finances during my service as a member of the board. Investigation develops the fact that no county in the United States of the same population of Fulton is in a better financial condition than this county, nor has any county in the United States, similarly situated, as many miles of paved highways as this county.

All this has been done without bonding the county for one penny. An effort was made a few weeks ago to have it appear that because the county had borrowed money to meet current expenses that it was hopelessly in debt, but as soon as the fact was developed that this money was borrowed simply for the purpose of meeting current expenses until the tax money came in, those who were aiming that shaft against me went to cover.

The truth is Fulton county does in this respect just as the state of Georgia or any other county, or any other state does. Practically every business house borrows money in the dull summer season to meet expenses until crops are harvested and money begins to move.

Fulton is no exception to the rule. She borrows money at this season of the year and when the tax payments are made she pays it back. Fulton county was never in a better financial condition than today, and the next year will result in an evenly balanced budget with more work done by this county inside and outside of the city limits than has ever been done by any county board since the creation of the county.

I will not undertake a campaign of vituperation against those who seek to defeat me for mayor by resorting to such methods. The office is not worth that much to me!

If my record of a life time in Atlanta is not enough to protect me against any such attacks then nothing that I could say would do so.

It has been my good fortune for practically my whole business life to be identified with both the north and the south sides of the city. I have always lived on the south side, and during all this period my business has been on the north side of the city. In this way not a day has passed for several decades when I have not been thrown in close contact with both sides of the city. No movement has ever been instituted in behalf of any part of the city that was not measured by me as a citizen and as an official who holds himself to be big enough and broad enough to view the city's welfare as a whole. No worthy movement has ever failed to receive my support, whether it be for the north or the south side.

I am confident that my fellow citizens of Atlanta will not be beguiled by the unjust methods being employed by my adversaries. They know, as the public knows, that my record justifies no such criticism as they have directed against me. From every part of the city assurances are coming to me that this method of campaigning is reacting to my advantage.

At any rate, I shall not meet my opponents on a platform of vituperation and abuse.

All I ask is that the people of Atlanta measure me by my record and by my personal and my business conduct for nearly a half century.

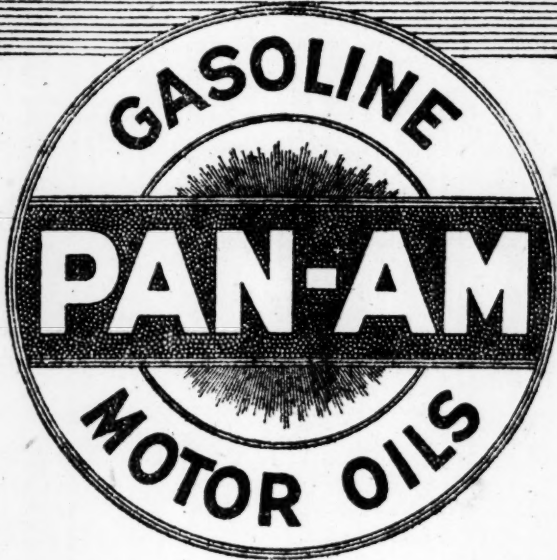

I am willing to give the best there is in me to the City of Atlanta, to which, with my past experience, I believe I can render valuable service. If in the opinion of my fellow citizens what I have rendered in the past makes me worthy of promotion I will esteem it an honor to receive their support for no greater honor can come to any citizen of our beloved city than to be given the privilege of presiding over its destiny.

I pledge the best there is in me, to the service of the city, and if elected, I will consecrate my best effort to make Atlanta a bigger and a better city.

Respectfully,

I. N. RAGSDALE.

Beautiful Church Ceremony Marks White-Brown Wedding

Among the beautiful weddings of early fall was that of Miss Ruby Estelle White to Herman Bainbridge Brown, which was solemnized at 6:30 o'clock Thursday evening, at St. Mark's Methodist church. Dr. J. B. Mitchell, pastor of the church, read the marriage service in the presence of a large assemblage of friends and relatives.

The church was handsomely decorated for the occasion, rich tropical palms flanking the altar which was flanked on either side with tall seven-branched candelabra holding white waxen tapers. Interspersing the background of green were white pedestals, filled with white and red and white asters. The central chandeliers and the wall lights were festooned with garlands of southern emulax and large bouquets of white and pink roses. The pews reserved for members of the family connection.

Preceding the entrance of the bride party, Miss Edna Bartholomew, organist of the church, rendered a beautiful program of nuptial music, the numbers including "Shubert's Serenade," "Evening Star," "Deep in My Heart," "Liebestraum," and "My Villa." Mrs. C. L. Green sang two solos, "Because," and "I Love You Truly." The "Venetian Love Song" was softly rendered during the ceremony, the wedding march from "Lohengrin" being used as the processional and Mendelssohn's march as the recessional.

Bridal Party Enters. The ushers entered first in pairs down opposite aisles and included James W. Austin, A. S. Cooper, Dr. J. B. Mitchell, and Frank G. North.

The bridesmaids entered singly down opposite aisles, alternating with the groomsmen in the following order: Miss Genevieve Connell, Miss Evelyn Donohoe, William J. Davis, Jr., W. Fuller Wells, Miss Mae Alva Avery, Miss Beatrice North, Paul Griffiths and J. R. Hartenfels. Miss Thelma Morang, first bridesmaid, entered with William A. Ross, Jr.

The bridesmaids' gowns, of satin, were all fashioned alike in bouffant style, tulle in the same shade as the gown, finishing the hem in scallops and giving the fashionable long effect. Handmade flowers in pastel shades made a lovely finish at the left side of the bodice and on the skirt, a spray of the same flowers finishing the right shoulder. They wore picture hats of maline, the crowns formed of narrow pink velvet ribbons, with graceful green streamers falling over the right shoulder. Miss Connell was gowned in blue satin, Miss Donohoe in sunset, Miss Avery in pink, Miss North in yellow, and Miss Morang in orchid. Their slippers matched their gowns and they carried old-fashioned, bonnet-shaped bouquets of pink and white roses, and pastel shaded blossoms, showered with narrow satin ribbons in harmonizing shades.

Miss Mildred Brown, sister of the groom, acted as maid of honor, entering alone. Her becoming gown was of green satin, fashioned like those of the bridesmaids, and her bouquet of pink roses was tied with pink satin ribbons and green tulle.

Miss Elizabeth Winship Walsh, small daughter of Mrs. Anne Bates Walsh, was the dainty flower girl, entering with Bobby Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Robinson, who was ring bearer. Little Miss Walsh wore a becoming frock of pink georgette, trimmed in handmade flowers, and she carried a graceful French basket filled with pastel shaded flowers, the handle tied with pink satin ribbon. Master Robinson, wore a suit of white satin, and carried the ring in a lily.

Beautiful Bride. The bride entered with her father, Richard Byrd White, who gave her in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Myron S. Brandt.

The dainty beauty of the bride was enhanced by her bridal robes of white crepe, embroidered in seed pearls and rhinestones and applied in handmade flowers of white satin, outlined in pearls. Fashioned with a becoming basque waist and a full circular skirt, the gown was finished with court train of satin falling from the shoulders. The veil of tulle was held in place by a tulle cap outlined with sprays of orange blossoms. The bride's only ornament was a platinum and diamond dinner ring, the gift of the groom, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and valley lilies, showered with narrow white satin ribbons.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

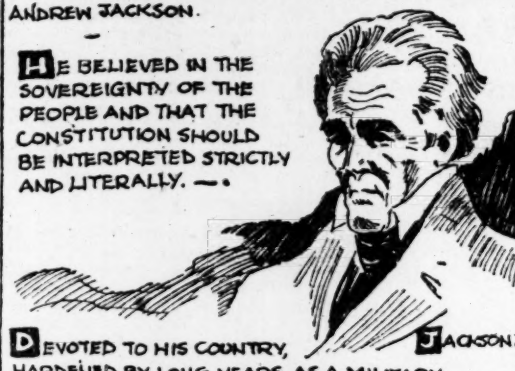

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

NO PRESIDENT, BEFORE OR SINCE, EVER DOMINATED THE PRESIDENCY WITH HIS PERSONALITY AS DID ANDREW JACKSON.

HE BELIEVED IN THE SOVEREIGNTY OF THE PEOPLE AND THAT THE CONSTITUTION SHOULD BE INTERPRETED STRICTLY AND LITERALLY. —

DEVOTED TO HIS COUNTRY, HARDENED BY LONG YEARS AS A MILITARY LEADER, JACKSON FELT THAT ALL WHO OPPOSED HIM WERE ENEMIES OF THE NATION. — HE BELIEVED HIMSELF TO BE THE CHAMPION OF THE COMMON PEOPLE AND YET RULED LIKE AN AUTOCRAT. — 11-20-26.

© 1926, BY THE MCGRAW-HILL PUBLISHING COMPANY, INC.

JACKSON'S RUGGEDNESS MADE MANY ENEMIES. HE FROWNED UPON THE POLICY OF MATERIAL IMPROVEMENTS AS A WASTE OF GOVERNMENT MONEY.

HE FORCED OUT MEMBERS OF HIS CABINET WHO DIFFERED WITH HIM AND ANTAGONIZED CLAY AND CALHOUN. — HIS SUPPORT CAME FROM A SMALL GROUP OF POLITICAL LEADERS. — OF THESE THE MOST PROMINENT WERE VAN BUREN OF NEW YORK AND BENTON OF MISSOURI.

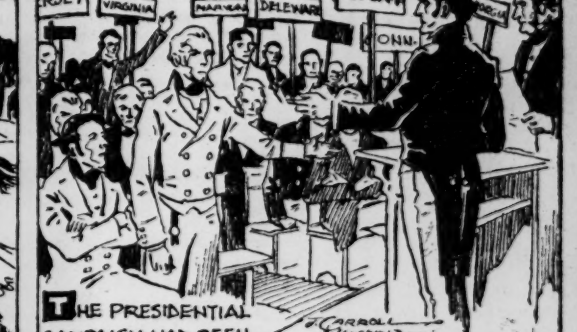

Jackson's Administration. by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

MANY OF JACKSON'S ACTS WERE SEVERELY CRITICIZED. — ONE OF THESE WAS HIS OVERTHROW OF THE UNITED STATES BANK WHICH HE CONSIDERED A MONOPOLY DANGEROUS TO THE PUBLIC.

TO CRUSH THIS INSTITUTION, HE VETOED THE BILL RENEWING ITS CHARTER IN 1832 AND IN 1833 ORDERED ALL PUBLIC DEPOSITS WITHDRAWN AND PLACED IN OTHER BANKS. — FOR THIS, JACKSON WAS CENSURED BY CONGRESS FOR EXCEEDING HIS AUTHORITY. — A QUARREL WITH CONGRESS FOLLOWED IN WHICH JACKSON CAME OFF VICTORIOUS.

JACKSON, HOWEVER, WAS POPULAR WITH THE PEOPLE AND IN THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION IN THE FALL OF 1832 HAD BEEN CHOSEN TO SERVE A 2ND TERM.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN HAD BEEN CONTESTED BY 3 POLITICAL PARTIES — THE DEMOCRATS, NATIONAL REPUBLICANS AND ANTI-MASONS. — FOR THE FIRST TIME THE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES HAD BEEN NOMINATED IN NATIONAL CONVENTIONS. —

Slams Salaams

and By Louise Dooly

DONNE BYRNE is only suggesting a method I found workable a long time ago for relieving an abstract anxiety (like an unrequited love or an artistic despair) when he advises: "Buy something you can't afford. Then you'll have something concrete to worry about."

A pleasant means to read one of Donne Byrne's fairy tale novels. They are as effective as chasing a golf ball to forget for the time being what ails you.

THE THING that made me want to read Sylvia Thompson's "Hounds of Spring" was William Lyon Phelps' comment that it is the best book published this year and Sherwood Anderson's "Dark Laughter" the worst. I had read the Anderson ratings, and thus my high opinion of Mr. Phelps' opinion.

Two other people came very near missing for me the Thompson book, because the said it was sad and had a disappointing ending. I read it and found they were right. It is sad and the ending is disappointing, and those are the reasons I enjoyed the book. The buckets of tears I shed were, I think, some proof of the sincerity of the book's pathos, while the heroine, one of those weak women with charm who has as much to do with making the world go round as have women of character, was bound to involve everybody concerned in her life in disappointing situations. Therefore, the ending of the book had been anything but disappointing, it would not have been believable. I have a happy ending. It is in the happy ending I never was keen on fairy stories.

TO CONSIDER DETAIL, the first part of the novel, with its picture of English home life in the country before the world war—what could be more lovely or moving? And with what real tenderness is the characterization done of "Hans" Renner, the transplanted and Anglicized Austrian. How charming, too, the glimpse of the highly sensitized Colin.

As for scenes, when has a contemporary novel presented one more forceful in its restraint than the emotional situation when Zina's father breaks the news to her lover (returned after his four years' "missing" in a German camp), that Zina has married? The author makes no excuses for Zina—only explanation. She has every character in the book tell Zina that she is "weak and coward," and Zina does not deny it, even though she will not face its implications. The denunciation is by no means intended as a happy ending. There is in the situation brought about by Zina's cowardice only a choice of evils. The author is remarkably fair in admitting that the final course of Zina and Colin was just a patching up of the result of her mistakes, and no washing away of the memory and the consequences of them.

THE ORTHODOX like myself will consider it significant that Zina, early in the story, alludes casually to the lack of religion in her generation and in herself, and then proves the need of it, both in the way she reacts to the news of Colin's disappearance, when she refuses to face life as it is, because she has no aid beyond her own weak spirit, and then in her lack of resisting power even in spite of husband and child, when she finds Colin is alive.

To my mind, the author, whether she intended it or not, has made her book a showing up of the weakness of the new negative philosophy, which has taken the place of what she would probably call the hypocrisies of Victorianism. Like all of her cult, she chafes at the restraints of a positive and authoritative morality, but she is at least fair enough to admit the flaws in the substitute.

I AM ASSUMING in these comments that most of my readers have read Miss Thompson's book. Everybody who reads fiction reads the same thing at the same time anyway, especially in vacation leisure, like that which has just passed by. It is a part of modern standardization. Who has failed, for instance, to make at least a try at "The Private Life of Helen of Troy?"

A try was all I accomplished at this sublimation of small-town gossip; sublimation, in its transference of the sophistry which was a "new note" in fiction 15 years ago, to the cloudy distance of Ilum for a fictitious novelty.

I did get through some chapters of the talkiness of Helen in my curiosity as to whether the author meant justification of Helen's "fine" logic as to truth and scandal; or whether he was poking fun at her. But the result did not promise to justify my effort, so I quit in the middle, and don't know yet.

AS AN ANTIDOTE, it is gratifying to find something so good as the way of a book like William Bolitho's "Italy Under Mussolini." I see by the papers, by the way, that Mr. William Bolitho, president of the American Federation of Labor, like Mr. Bolitho, and a host of readers making his book a best seller, prefers facts to fiction.

And yet this book is as full of action as a Jesse James narrative, even though it does show up the hero as the police records must have painted the western outlaw; not as the romantic figure which the dime novel outlet would make the one, or fashion-made propaganda the other.

BUT, THEN, there are things like "Beau Sabreur" still to read, and the summer zone, and a world of actual happenings every day as intriguing as the exploits of Christopher Wren.

One's only hope is that chemistry, which is busy just now promising of itself even more than does Krishnamurti, will enable us after awhile, by the use of some perpetual stimulant, to do without sleep.

Membership Committee To Sponsor Dinner.

The membership committee of the West End Woman's club, Miss Elizabeth Young, chairman, will sponsor a chicken dinner on Friday evening, September 17, between the hours of 7:30 and 9 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Jeff Wright on the Adamsville road. A very attractive menu has been planned, consisting of fried chicken, tomato salad, corn, rice and hot biscuits. The proceeds will go toward the building fund for the erection of the beautiful new clubhouse on Cascade road. Work began on this building on last Monday with very impressive ceremonies. The lot was donated in 1924 to the club by Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Ragsdale. Tickets can be purchased for this supper from any club member at 50c per plate. All candidates in the coming election are cordially invited to come and help in this splendid work.

Seminary Opens With Attendance Record Broken

Washington seminary opened its scholastic term for the 1926-27 season at 8:30 o'clock Thursday morning with the largest attendance and enrollment ever recorded.

Llewellyn Scott, principal, gave an interesting and strong talk on "Education in the Home, School and Church," telling what education meant to girls, and showing how the value of an education increased the earning capacity and fitted a girl to meet and cope with the situations or emergencies which would confront her throughout her life.

The program included besides Mr. Scott's talk, two numbers on the piano by Lawrence Everhart, pianist, who is a new member of the Washington seminary faculty, and the only change or addition in the faculty. He was introduced by Mr. Scott, and played "Waltz Etude" by Saint Saens, and "Rondo Capriccioso" by Mendelssohn, showing strength and delicacy of touch and proving his perfect knowledge of music.

Miss Battle who has been studying voice in Milan, Italy, this summer, sang an Italian folk song and closed the program very brilliantly with the "Invocation to Life."

Many of the alumnae were present and added to the interest of the "opening day" when school work started in earnest and classes were formed.

"The line's the thing," said Paul Poiret long since.

The new school of designers took him at his word, and now through the breadth of the land length is produced by slenderizing lines—the mystery and magic of attenuated lines.

That, briefly, is the problem entire of women who wear large or extra sizes.

Our designers have solved it with the broad, free strokes of the rapidly moving lines in these dresses, slimly making slenderness.

Try one of them on. Revelation! Apparition in the mirror! No—the mirror is true, and pounds come off through the sovereign remedy of lines by artist-designers!

Each frock shows interesting adaptations of the new Autumn modes—always with studied perfection of line. Dull-surfaced materials are preferable for their slenderizing qualities—crepe jolite, faille canton, canton crepe, georgette, crepe de chine, frost crepe. Dark colors, of course, but of subdued richness—claret, sable, chanel, jungle, moonlight, navy, black. Sizes 36 to 52 1-2.

INSTALLMENT XLVII.
BRETT'S EXPLANATION.

Richenda had expected the man of her dreams to come to her with a spotless past behind him. How many women in the world of today could hope for that? He had come to her like a child scared of the mischief it had wrought the hour before, frightened to tell, yet longing for understanding, sympathy, forgiveness and a new beginning.

Men were always children. "The true woman is mother as well as wife to the man she loves." Suddenly Richenda remembered that a wise aunt of her girlhood had once said that.

But she had done her best to send Fairways from her heart with Shudders of pain ran through him as she moved him.

fierce words—dismissing him back to the past out of which she might have lifted him into new happiness.

And now he lay at her feet, that tender, boyish softness upon his parted lips . . . helpless, hers to care for or to leave—as she wished.

Her hand was on his heart again when she suddenly discovered that his eyes were opened full, bent on her with a queer half-humorous gaze.

She held the flask of brandy to his lips, crooking an arm under his head to raise it till he could sip the amber liquid. Shudders of pain ran through him as she moved him, a shadowy grayness stole across his face, but still the twinkling laughter lurked in those narrowed eyes.

"You'll . . . be . . . able . . . to make . . . your getaway . . . quite safely now . . . Dickie," his voice was oddly cracked.

"O, hush, hush! I—"

"That's . . . if . . . I don't . . . make mine . . . first."

The grim laughter crept from eyes to lips as he slipped back into unconsciousness again.

It was some fifteen minutes later that she heard his voice again.

"Dickie"—the name came with something of its old intonation from his lips—"Dickie, may I . . . explain?"

"Not now," she whispered. "Later on, when you are strong again, then—"

"There might not be any later on!" he broke in. "I want to tell you . . . about Monica . . ." His voice failed him suddenly and she lifted the brandy to his seeking lips.

"Don't worry, Brett. Tell me afterwards," she implored.

"Monica didn't . . . play . . . the game. She wasn't built . . . for faithfulness. She . . . carried on with other men . . . And when I was . . . going . . . to divorce her I found that . . . out of sheer spite she meant to drag the name of another woman into the court . . . to couple it with mine . . . A good woman, married, who was nothing more than a close friend to me, but whose husband was that sort of . . . jealous swine that would put her through hell if the faintest tinge of scandal . . . came to him."

His voice was stronger now, tense with indignant memory.

"Monica knew there was nothing wrong between Elizabeth and me . . . knew that the mention of her name in court would ruin Elizabeth, even though her innocence would be quite clear. That husband of hers . . . would always be her with suspicion. Elizabeth came to me, distracted . . . and, for her sake, I did the thing Monica had reckoned I would do—I . . . stopped the divorce proceedings."

"After that I . . . went away . . . went off the track a bit . . . didn't care much about anything . . . soured, bitter . . . came across Lucille . . . thought nothing mattered. It was when I knew I had begun to love you, Dickie, that I got the news of Monica's death . . . in a motor smash."

He finished the story with words that were halting and faint. She heard how, if Lucille had realized he were free to marry again, she would have done her best to separate him from Richenda.

"I never realized the sheer evil of her . . . till I saw the game she meant to play against you, Dickie. Powers above, the things that greed for money will lead such women to! But I dared not speak till I'd got you safely mine . . . she'd have told you things . . . made them seem even worse than they were . . . and that was bad enough in all conscience—the half grim smile was on his lips again—"I meant to make a clean breast of it to you afterwards . . . thought I could make you understand. But you heard too soon, the bit between your teeth, Dickie . . . didn't give me much of a chance. I suppose the roots of your love hadn't had time to grow down very deep."

"I knew if I let you get away then you'd be lost to me forever. Hate grew even quicker than love, didn't it? I hung on to you, hoping that, by and by, you'd . . . calm down—I'm a clumsy devil . . . might have managed things a bit more cleverly . . . blundered all along the line . . . I see that now . . . couldn't expect a girl like you . . . to settle down comfortably to sheer captivity. But when a man loves a woman, so that he feels the pain of her scorn . . . right through to his very soul, he gets . . . all panicky lest he . . . lose her. I got like that, Dickie, may be Providence . . . is . . . going to . . . set you free of me . . . pretty soon now. I've a sort of hunch that—"

"O, Brett, Brett, don't!" she was sobbing now.

"But anyway, you needn't worry any more. I'll never hold you against your . . . will . . . again. Those . . . roots, Dickie, the roots of love . . . they hadn't grown down deep enough in you. Perhaps . . . the . . . soil . . . was too young . . . too shallow . . ." A little gasping sigh, a flickering of the eyelids, and he was silent.

"She bent forward, the quick tears chasing down her quivering cheeks. "Brett, listen—"

"Too young . . . too . . . shallow . . ." The faint words came mechanically from the lips of the man who was again beyond the sound of her voice, slipping into muttering delirium. "Too . . . shallow."

Suddenly she felt that something of just condemnation lay in the words of that odd whisper.

It was a few minutes later that she heard a hail from across the plain and, jumping to her feet, discovered the welcome form of Jerome speeding towards her, accompanied by two white men. She was amazed at his quick return.

Amusements

The Rialto.

Fate took Theodore Roberts from the screen when he was stricken more than two years ago, while making a personal appearance in Pittsburgh and placed him in a wheelchair. Now, strangely enough, it has made that same wheelchair the medium of his return to the studio.

The "grand old man of the screen," clear and all, is back in pictures. He is at the Rialto in "The Cat's Pajamas," starring Betty Bronson and Ricardo Cortez in a wheel chair.

Betty's role is that of a girl, working in a fashionable New York gown establishment to support her invalid father. Cortez plays a temperamental opera singer.

At the Forsyth.

A fine comedy, in fact, a most excellent laugh producer, "The Best People," written in the finest Hollywood vein, is furnishing huge thrills and many laughs at the Forsyth theater. In fact, it is about the funniest play in local theater circles in some time.

If you can't laugh, don't go, but go and try to keep from it.

"Seventh Heaven" is coming up for next week—and it's a ripping good show, too.

West End Theater.

Playing its last time at the West End theater is the popular Jack Holt photoplay, "Sea Horses," which has proved to be one of the most successful films ever made by the studio. The film is excellent, both in story and portrayal by characters. The locale is the South Sea islands, which have furnished the inspiration for some of the world's most famous stories. The story for "Sea Horses" has been woven around new and distinctly pleasing lines, and it is also to be noted that this picture is free from the usual amount of conventional island stories. Holt is supported by an extraordinarily capable cast.

Tudor Theater.

Wally Wales, who stars in "Twisted Triggers," now being shown for the first time in Atlanta at the Tudor, is scheduled by right of his speed and daring, as well as acting ability, to be one of the most famous stars in the western stars in the near future.

In this picture, "Twisted Triggers," he gives a sample of his speed, fast and hard fighting, quick moving, which brands him as a player of first water. The picture is highly enjoyable and is as packed with action and suspense as any picture can be shown.

Veterans' Party

Will Be Visitors At Circus Monday

Approximately 750 Confederate veterans and disabled war veterans will be the guests of Theodore Roosevelt Camp No. 8, United Spanish War Veterans, at the circus Monday.

The circus, which is being given by the Southern Railway, will be at the Highland Avenue Grounds Monday afternoon. The circus is being given by the Southern Railway, which is a patriotic organization, and it is a pleasure to have the veterans and their families at the circus.

TWO-THIRDS RULE NO LONGER NEEDED, STATES WOODSON

Owensboro, Ky., September 16.—(AP)—The two-thirds rule has been abandoned by the Kentucky National Democratic Committee, which is holding its annual convention here tonight.

"The practice of introducing 'favorite son' candidates from many states has been reduced to a fine art," as witness the Madison Square Garden convention in 1924. These favorite sons were trumped up, in many cases, after the delegates arrived in New York, only to wear out the convention and defeat the popular choice for the nomination. Such a condition might well be repeated true and again unless we abandon the two-thirds rule."

Fourth Ward Club Hears Candidates Tell Issues At Thursday Night Rally

Miss Helen Douglas Praises Ragsdale's Record—Other Mayoralty Candidates Speak or Are Praised.

Atlanta's race for mayor and other city offices Thursday night shifted to the Snellville school in the fourth ward, where candidates delivered campaign speeches before the newly-organized Fourth Ward Improvement club. Charles M. Ford and Allen Couch spoke in their own behalf, while Walter P. Andrews stepped in as pinch-hitter for R. A. Gordon and Miss Helen Douglas, who was born in the ward, spoke for I. S. Ragsdale and Miss Helen Douglas, a candidate for council from this ward, outlined the issues, while Earl McGhee spoke in behalf of Dr. J. W. Vaughn, also a candidate for council. Max Lonsberg, president of the club, presided.

Miss Douglas said Mr. Ragsdale regretted keenly that he could not be present at the meeting because of another engagement. She declared that Atlanta is growing as never before, that business houses and residences which were vacant a year ago are filled, that new buildings are being erected all over the city and that Atlanta faces an era of progress which demands that an able and experienced business man, thoroughly well grounded in his knowledge of business government, be elected mayor at this time.

"In looking over the records of the candidates I picked Mr. Ragsdale as being a man who is head and shoulders above all the candidates in the race," she said. "Mr. Ragsdale is clean, and he is big enough and broad enough to be a mayor of all the people and not a factional mayor. He has run a clean race and has not sought to ride into any office by attacking or defaming in any way any of the other candidates."

Records Clean.

Miss Douglas said Mr. Ragsdale's private and public records were unimpeachable and his political opponents had investigated every detail of these records and had been unable to find anything against him.

"Mr. Ragsdale has stuck by Atlanta through thick and thin, in storm and stress," she said. "About one year ago this city faced the biggest crisis in its career when the Florida boom was at its height and people were leaving Atlanta. That's one of the things about Mr. Ragsdale that appealed to me. He stuck by this town and remained here with the people of this city and did double duty by bringing back again to Atlanta the flow of progress which is soon to be a flood."

Mr. Andrews, in speaking for Mr. Gordon, said Mr. Gordon favors improvement of the city. He said Mr. Gordon had pledged himself to clean up the city and said Atlanta needs a strong man like Gordon to stand up to the police department and force that department to do its duty.

"If you don't put a strong man like Gordon in charge, the city will drift along from bad to worse and God knows things are bad enough as they are," he said.

Says Others Too Young.

Mr. Andrews said Allen Couch was too young and inexperienced to be elected mayor at this time and would remain as alderman a term or two longer.

"You ought to leave Allen on the vine long enough for him to ripen," he said.

Mr. Andrews said the same thing could be applied to Mr. Ford. Mr. Couch said he was running on his own initiative as a candidate for mayor and was not the candidate of any clique or faction. He said he favored improvement in the schools of Atlanta.

Mr. Ford declared that he is making this race for mayor squarely on his record as alderman. He said the city needs a young and progressive man to serve as mayor and that the city should be free from politics. He promised to give the city a clean and progressive administration if elected.

IMPROVEMENT CLUB OF FOURTH WARD IS REORGANIZED

Max Lonsberg, acting chairman of the Fourth Ward Improvement club, Thursday night was elected president of the reorganized club at an initial meeting at the E. W. Snellville school. W. A. Graham was made secretary-treasurer.

Candidates for city offices in Wednesday's primary election were heard for a few minutes each after the business session of the club. A number of candidates for city office appeared and presented their cause.

REPRESENTATIVE HILL ASKS FOR RECOUNT

Baltimore, September 16.—(AP)—Representative John Philip Hill requested a recount of the vote in several Maryland counties to file petitions for a recount in his primary contest with United States Senator O. E. Weller for the republican senatorial nomination. After the election, Hill in all but three or four of the counties had finished their canvass of the returns. Weller tonight had won the state convention vote of 17 of the 23 counties in the state, and seven of the votes in Baltimore city—58 in all. DEMOCRATS OFFER HIGH CALIBER MEN

Washington, September 16.—(AP)—The democrats have placed before the nation the biggest and best democratic slate in each district. Chairman Oldfield, of the democratic congressional committee, said today in a statement summarizing the results of the primaries in the various states.

On the other hand, he said, the republican primaries brought about "widespread dissension, revealed wholesale corruption, demonstrated the unfitness of many of them to hold high office and the danger of a republican-controlled government to the welfare of the people."

Chairman Oldfield said the drive for the "biggest and best democratic slate in each district" was begun early last summer, and the caliber of the candidates chosen spoke well for the effort.

Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, will preside as chairman at 7:30 o'clock Monday night, over the joint debate between mayoralty and aldermanic candidates in the auditorium, it was announced, as all candidates will be given the opportunity of being heard. DURRETT WINNER B. Y. P. U. CONTEST IN DECLARATION

Thomas J. Durrett, of the First Baptist church, Thursday night won the city wide Baptist Young People's Union championship for declaiming. The final round of the declamation contest rested between Mr. Durrett and Walter G. Cooper, Jr. The two rivals appeared before an audience of 500 members of the union at the Second Baptist church, and with a brilliant declaration upon "Know Jesus," Mr. Durrett won a hard earned victory.

The two finalists were the survivors of the first elimination rounds of the contest. Both Mr. Durrett and Mr. Cooper will receive medals at the next B. Y. P. U. meeting, the former as champion, and the latter as runner-up.

E. Powell Lee, new director of music at the Baptist Tabernacle, was the city union chorister at the meeting.

LIQUOR RECIPES BRING BIG DEMAND FOR YEAR BOOK

Washington, September 16.—(AP)—Agriculture officials have been puzzled for some time over the wide demand for the 1927 agriculture year book. Some inquiry disclosed that the book contains a number of recipes, with illustrations for making cakes,burgers, and other red and white wines, and officials now understand.

LOVE FLOUTS TIME AS AGED INMATES OF HOME MARRY

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.) Indianapolis, September 16.—Proving that love laughs not only at old-smiths but also at Father Time, the marriage was celebrated today of Caroline Becker, 78, and Karl Feltz, 85, both living at Altenheim, the German home for the aged.

This was the first marriage ever contracted at the home in its 20 years of sheltering elderly people, say the directors who consented to the marriage.

STEAMER SINKS; CREW IS MISSING

London, September 16.—(AP)—The Italian steamer Ellenis sank to the bottom of the ocean today off the British coast, but what has become of her crew remains a mystery.

The first report to Lloyd's that all hands were lost appears to have been premature, for the steamer Homeric, which hurried to the rescue of the sinking steamer, reports the possibility that the crew was picked up as numerous fishing craft were in the vicinity but no word has been heard of them as yet.

The Belgian steamer Indier reports finding an empty life boat.

The disaster was due to a collision between the Ellenis and the British steamer Indina, which, although damaged, was able to continue.
